ally they are cut into geometric patterns—into triangles, cubes, squares and parallelograms.

The vases that used to contain them have gone into the discard. Cats, pigs, dogs, alligators, crocodiles and other strange animals along with still stranger idols are used instead. They are not regular cats, dogs, pigs and idols, in their natural form and shape but cats, dogs, pigs and idols that have been either futurized or cubized. They come in all sorts of impossible shapes and never-was colors.

Most of them carry appropriate inscriptions. The green and yellow cat says: "Bring your smile with you for good luck awaits you when you see me." The pig's message is: "I will stick to you if you will stick to me." The Chinese idol prophesies: "I will fight your troubles in all that is right." The green and black cat carries the promise: "I will charm all your ills away," and the black cat makes the appeal: "Possess me and be happy."

In the costumes as in the china and floral decorations there is an endless range through the land of futurist ideas. For the benefit of any who may have a desire to give a futurist party it may be suggested that the costume of an "early Victorian vampire" is quite effective. It lends itself to a variety of interpretations. A "full intensity brain storm" may also be translated into a costume with startling results. "Irish tomatoes" is another title which permits one to roam where one will in the land of crazy dress designs. "Feathered frog" and "ethereal half-wit" carry their own suggestions along with themselves. They can result in as many costumes as there are ingenious people capable of seeing upon an idea.

Now comes the menu. The startling table china, floral decorations and costumes are but gradual steps up to the most startling thing of the party. It was France, the home of good cooking, which invented the futurist menu and developed them to their highest point of wildness.

Some doubting Thomases say that these modern futurist menus have been formulated by France's enemies to prejudice the human race against her and prove that she is the greatest barbarian of them all.

On the other hand more lenient people have professed to see in these menus attempts of desperate journalists in Paris to find some combination or permutation of words to elude the censor successfully and to telegraph to America some real news concerning the actual state of events in that war-ridden land.

Still others feel that they are messages communicating in code, unseen though in plain sight, the details of some diabolical plot from whose consequences the world will presently tremble to its core.

These menus are the literary side of futurist cooking, although intelligent readers find it hard to believe. Despite the horrors that have been done in the name of war, no one who has looked upon a futurist painting will believe that any man would purposely introduce anything of that sort into another human being's interior economy. It would be beyond the pale of barbarism.

Everybody knew that futurist cooking had to come. Futurist art, futurist music and futurist literature had been given to the eager world. Futurist clothing has had a very successful tryout. And now comes the futurist cooking to complete the scale.

Despite all the mystery and strangeness which enshroud this new art there is at least one thing that can truthfully and definitely be said about it. And that is that the average man will have to cultivate a taste for it before he will be likely to enjoy it or even attempt to enjoy it.

One dish is composed of tomatoes and brandy, which might prove rather tolerable to many men provided the ingredients were fairly well divided so as to leave a preponderance of the fluid. A popular soup has been compounded, or invented, or concocted, the distinguishing feature of which is that it is flavored liberally with cod liver oil.

Another choice futurist combination for the table is barbershops in raspberry jam and served with whipped cream. Beef cooked in cumlin and served with bananas stuffed with cheese is something entirely futurist and worth trying at least once.

The "new art" cooks are extremely fond of cooking the vegetables "au naturel" without scraping them. Potatoes, carrots, turnips and even peas and various sorts of beans are thrown into the pot in just the garb in which they came from the garden. After they are cooked they are served still with their original coverings on in petroleum jelly.

A choice dish is the one composed of canned fish eaten with a sauce consisting of oil and vinegar, Yorkshire relish, salt and pepper. What remains of this sauce after the fish are eaten may be poured over an English plum pudding. Other appetizing dishes, after one gets used to them, are beefsteak with strawberry jam, fried salmon with marmalade, roast mutton with currant jelly. These in themselves are not particularly startling. They begin to be futurist when to the preserves and jam is added a fair amount of ether for a sauce. Fresh strawberries are also served with ether and any one who does not like them this way can have them served with vinegar poured over them.

However improbable it may seem at present the world will unquestionably adopt these innovations in the serving of food within a reasonable length of time. The world, it must be remembered, is not one-tenth so conservative in anything as it is in its diet. This is proved by the fact that in the past hundred years there has not been a change in eating which could be called at all revolutionary.

The world adopts new art, new music, new styles in clothes, new religions and new social ideas. But what it ate a hundred or more years ago it still eats.

Those who do not consider themselves very old can remember when tomatoes were called "love apples." They were used in homes—in the parlors on mantel pieces—as ornaments but never in the kitchen or dining-room as food. They were pronounced rank poison.

Then came along a particularly hardy and daring fellow who discovered that not only were tomatoes not rank poison but that they were a particularly fine sort of food and possessed the ability of lending themselves to a great variety of culinary uses. It took him many years to impress upon the world the fact that tomatoes are a delicious vegetable. Even today there are some of the old line conservatives who, once having used tomatoes as ornaments, cannot bring themselves to use them as food.

There is the classic example of olives and the way they first taste. It is safe to say that to olive eater in the world ever enjoyed his first olive—or the second for that matter. A taste for olives has to be cultivated. Grapefruit is very much in the same class. The man who says he enjoyed his first grapefruit lays open his record for veracity to suspicion. People who have nothing else to do are always doing something that appears outlandish and silly. But they sometimes get away with it. If it were not for the imaginative fools the world would be a sad place indeed.

At the present time the futurist chefs are receiving the taunts and jeers and quips which not so long ago were visited upon their brethren, the futurist painters, musicians and writers. But who is there to say that bananas stuffed with cheese, tomatoes and brandy, and soup with cod liver oil will not in a few years come to the table as regularly as French fried potatoes, oyster stew and ice cream now do?

They may taste unpleasant, disagreeable, impossible at first. But so did olives and grapefruit, not to mention a dozen other popular dishes.

FUTURISM has struck the dining-room table and the house parties that revolve around it.

Like a Kansas cyclone the new art has wrecked the old style cut glass and delicate china tableware with delicate flower designs. It has picked up the old fashioned table bouquet of gentle maidenhair fern and pale pink and lavender flowers and swirled it through the window into the back yard where stands the garbage can.

The futurist party is different from soup to nuts, from flowers to ferns, from costumes to behavior. It doesn't necessarily have to be anything in particular. There is just one thing that makes a futurist party and that is that it should be entirely different from every other party which has gone before it. That is the simple secret of the thing.

It takes the chef, the florist and the costume designer to bring a futurist party together, for the real futurist party is a combination of all of these things.

The delicate, pale table china of yester-year is replaced with a tableware that can be just as delicate in texture and weight but which is boldly futurist in design and color.

Broad rings of color go swirling around the rims of the plates and saucers, and around the cups. Sometimes a bold check design is used. No matter what the design is it is always and forever bold. Black is a favorite color in the futurist ware. In fact black is used not only in the ware but in embroidering designs on table cloths and on napkins. Salt cellars, cream pitchers, finger bowls and other special ware of the sort are now to be had in odd, cubistic shapes. In fact anything different goes.

The futurist flower decorations are a joy all by themselves. They are a joy likewise to the florists, who are glad of the opportunity to get away from the humdrum decorations of the conventional party. And it may be added the futurist flowers are a veritable joy to the guests.

The strongest contrasts possible in colors are required. Reds are freely used with greens, blacks with whites, blues with yellows, violets with oranges. Likewise nature is freely handled and, as the futurist florists claim, freely improved upon. Flowers are cut into whatever shape is necessary to carry out the scheme the futurist florist has in mind. "A BAD RUN"

John Barker scouted many months. And kept the police waiting. Until at last they spotted him. When he was out skating.

"We were hunting John for several months," stated an officer, when John Barker was under judicial scrutiny at Saturday's police matinee. "He stole an overcoat and pawned it, and has been on the scout ever since."

"How came the cops to slip up on you this time?" the recorder asked the prisoner.

"Hit was me who slipped up," replied John. "They caught me when I had on my pair of skates" as when tried on I took a tumble.

"It seems to me," said the recorder, "that you ought to have outskated the cops and not away."

"I did skate at first," was the reply, "and was getting in the lead but I struck a rough road and then I went down."

"That was on your own motion, I might remark," the recorder went on to say. "You have been going all sorts of guits, any way, and I am going to send you to jail for stealing that overcoat. You will find plenty of cheap skates over there, John."

"I ain't nobber wiser than I was no more skates as long as I lib," muttered the prisoner as he was led away.

"They sure caused your downfall," the recorder called out to him. "You change your pace when you get out of the chainfence. If you will tumble to that you will be all right."

Caused His Downfall.

"WHAR'S DAT COP?"

Had the Cops Guessing. The Artful Dodger of Darktown. Was one slick evildoer. Who mystified the perplexed cops. By crawling through a sewer.

"So you are the noted Artful Dodger of Darktown," the recorder said to Sam Coleman, who was wanted for breaking a billiard cue over another negro's head.

"This is the fellow, your honor," stated the arresting officer, "who caused such a mystery in Darktown and who had the police guessing by crawling through a sewer."

"Hit was my business to keep out of the cops' business," said the dodger, "and I was just as good as dead when I was caught. I was in a blind alley, where he couldn't run or dodge either."

"You have been playing hide and seek and peek-a-boo with the cops, have you, Sam?" asked the recorder.

"Hit was my business to keep out of the cops' business," said the dodger, "and I was just as good as dead when I was caught. I was in a blind alley, where he couldn't run or dodge either."

"You are exactly right," the recorder told him, "and I don't blame any fellow for dodging from the cops as long as he can. All dodgers are all right, even corn dodgers, Sam, but this time you dodged the cops for thirty days, and if you try any sewer read all the books they will get sent to your hide."

"I ain't no dodger, me up fer hidin' in dat sewer pipe," the prisoner asked.

"You was told to 'You are sent up for ruinin' that billiard cue. We must protect our cues, Sam, just like the Chinese do."

AMATEUR GARDENERS

The plan of an ardent gardener that we print below has been lying unprinted a long while.

It was a little premature in its sanguine expression, but even though it may still be, we give it space, adding to it our own urging for concerted campaign for the Atlanta Home Garden League.

It is a fine thing for each man to have his own garden, fine for him and fine for his friends. It is fine for his city, and especially fine for the league work began in Atlanta eighteen months ago. But something more is needed, something inclusive.

Dawn of a New Era.

We are facing a new era. It is an era of co-operative work. We dare approach the subject of the garden fearlessly, because the cultivation of waste spaces about our homes and city is only common sense.

Even the hardest heads are now agreeing that the beauty of natural things works a good so real that it can be measured. So co-operation of gardeners must and will come.

It is necessary for the garden of the garden idea.

The beginning was when we organized with a constitution that permits the grow-up to join our ranks and help us make it the success that it is in Los Angeles and other western cities, where it has swept the nation.

The Atlanta Home Garden League presents the unit that has started the garden body of amateur gardeners in home work. This league work, under the city federation, is the developing unit in the civic life we dare hope to bring into the city and live in our midst through school and home garden, and the cultivation of vacant lots in each ward.

Amateur Home Gardeners.

For the amateur home gardener, make a plan.

I am not unkind of the many articles and text-books written for his benefit, when I say that these are inadequate for the situation.

Reading how to do a thing and getting out and doing it is quite another thing. It reminds one of advice so often given by those who simply make a habit of talking idly, but who never advise and books are two of our

ROTARIANS OF MACON WILL HONOR HARRIS

Committee Visits Atlanta to Arrange for Inauguration Dinner.

Macon Rotarians are planning to honor their first citizen—Governor-elect Nat E. Harris—in a marked degree on June 28, when he assumes his duties as chief executive of Georgia. They will operate two special trains to Atlanta, bringing 2,000 people who will parade the streets of Atlanta headed by the Macon drum and bugle corps, and will play a conspicuous part at the inauguration.

A committee of Macon Rotarians, composed of George H. Long, president, John W. Mount and M. E. Goode spent Saturday in Atlanta, arranging some of the details for the affair and they promised some big stunts to be featured by the organization they represent.

It is said that one of the features will be a great big dinner for the Macon delegation, at which Governor Harris will be the honor guest. There will also be a number of Atlanta people present by invitation.

Since the Macon Rotary club was organized two years ago, it has fallen to their lot to take the initiative in putting on many unearmarked in the Central City that required plenty of enthusiasm coupled with determination and they have yet to fail. They put through the plan for the Georgia jubilee, now an annual affair at Macon; they got behind a bond issue and had it passed and have taken an active part in other civic movements.

With the election of Judge Harris the Rotary club got busy and laid plans for showing Macon's appreciation of the governor-elect and they did not stop until they had brought 2,000 of their citizens to the inauguration.

Major Bridge Smith, who is a member of the club, and says that he likes the organization because there are so many luncheon connected with its activities, will accompany the Macon delegation. He is a life-long friend of the governor-elect.

Capital City Club Roof Garden to Open On Tuesday Evening

The beautiful roof garden of the Capital City club is now complete and will be thrown open to members of the club with an elaborate dinner-dance on Tuesday evening.

The entire roof of the club has been covered with beautiful green trellises which are draped with ferns and flower boxes.

The flooring is covered with a grass carpet, which is then covered with a thick canvas used for dancing.

The seating capacity of the roof garden is 240 for a dinner.

The roof garden proved to be the most popular spot in Atlanta last summer, and the roof garden then occupied only a small portion of the building.

Following Tuesday evening's dance, music and dancing will be held every Monday, Wednesday and Friday night.

Decatur Trade Board Opposes Consolidation Of DeKalb and Fulton

Holding that the proposed merger of DeKalb and Fulton counties is a proposition which affects the welfare of Decatur and DeKalb counties, and that it is not a political question, it is under their supervision, members of the Decatur board of trade passed a resolution at a recent meeting opposing that consolidation. The question was carried by a vote of 10 to 2.

It is a precedent that the Decatur board of trade take no action in political matters, and members of the board, after taking up the question from every angle, decided that politics was not an issue.

STONE QUARRY TRAGEDY PROBED BY GIRARDEAU

The tragedy at the stone quarry on the Newnan road, near East Point, in which three convicts lost their lives through a premature blast of dynamite Friday evening, is being probed by Convict Warden C. H. Girardeau.

This probe is being conducted for the purpose of furnishing the state penitentiary with a detailed report of the facts. Warden Girardeau states that he does not expect to obtain, however, any data casting a different light upon the accident than that presented to the coroner's jury, which exonerated all concerned from blame.

Two of the convicts, A. M. Bell and William J. Thornton, were killed outright and Michael Male, the third, died after Saturday in the Grady hospital. Deputy Warden W. H. Johnson, Foreman W. A. Hilton and fifteen guards were with the men when the explosion, but escaped without serious injury.

F. B. LUDWIG RETURNS FROM HOLLIER & PLANT

F. B. Ludwig, of the firm of Ludwig & Morton, district sales manager for the Hollier plant, has just returned from a most delightful trip to the plant of the Lewis Spring and Axle company, of Jackson, Mich., manufacturer of this car, where he reports the plant as running to its fullest capacity, with orders largely in excess of production.

Mr. Ludwig says the factory has just closed large contracts in Australia and New Zealand, two representatives from the countries being in the plant when he was there, and with whom he had business of a kind.

Since opening their agency here, Ludwig and Morton have been doing with splendid business and are not only meeting with much success in the tire department, but are closing agency contracts far in excess of what they reasonably anticipated.

SOLICITOR GAMBLE GAINS HIGH PRAISE BY EFFICIENT WORK

Athens, Ga., June 12.—(Special).—John B. Gamble, general of the western circuit, has just demonstrated his ability to turn out more work than most lawyers would like to tackle in double the time. He spent one day in Lawrenceville this week and tried sixteen defendants, six of them pleading guilty and the other ten being convicted. He returned to Athens and worked till daylight on the case of J. W. Griffin, bank president, just sentenced for bank-robbing.

The conduct of the bank cases, especially that of Cashier R. W. Woods of the Citizens bank, who was convicted of embezzlement, and has just been sentenced, Mr. Gamble drew the warmest words of praise from judge and jury—even the defendant's counsel commending his energy and ability. The defendant is connected by marriage relations with the solicitor, but the case was fought as ably as if there had been no such relation.

Judge Brand said the solicitor general conducted the case "with great skill and ability, and was faithful in his performance of duty." Judge Brickell said he commended the case for fairness and justice, valiantly fighting, but leaving no wounds.

Aid Chamber Members To Secure Customers In Foreign Countries

A system has been inaugurated recently in the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce whereby members of the organization can be given helpful information along industrial and manufacturing lines which will tend to give those members an insight into and place them closer in touch with export possibilities presented by the department of commerce at Washington.

By an entirely new system of cooperation direct with the department of commerce the local industrial organization can place its members in communication with prospective customers in foreign lands. A number of Atlanta manufacturers have taken advantage of this opportunity and the results are being reported to officials of the chamber.

Harvey Johnson, secretary of the industrial bureau, in its receipt of bulletins on foreign trade and commerce reports which he places in the hands of Atlanta jobbers, manufacturers and merchants if they can be benefited by the information which these pamphlets contain.

Inquiries have been received regarding cotton fabrics, cotton oils, metal and cake, metal beds, cane, plate, agricultural implements of all kinds, shoes, paper products, overalls, neckwear, etc. It is a most complete list of commodities which embraces nearly all articles manufactured in Atlanta.

VINEGAR IS SEIZED BY DEPUTY MARSHAL

United States Deputy Marshal J. B. Brock seized a quantity of "Apple Pie Ridge" vinegar Saturday afternoon, which was being sold in violation of the law. The vinegar was found in a store in the city of Atlanta. The storekeeper, who was charged with the sale of the vinegar, was fined $100 and the vinegar was confiscated.

BILL WILL BE DRAWN FOR A COUNTY LIBRARY

As some doubt had been expressed as to whether the county would establish a law library, Attorney Burton Smith, chairman of the education and administration committee of the Atlanta bar association, has taken up the matter with the members of the legislature from Fulton county and with the county commissioners.

The county commissioners have referred the drawing of a proper bill, to be introduced in the legislature this summer, to county Attorney G. E. Purness, who is now in the public buildings, composed of County Commissioners Smith and Mitchell, Representative H. B. Blackburn, Representative J. B. Blackburn, and the legislative committee on education and administration.

The library will be of great benefit to the county, as the expense will be more than offset by the avoidance of errors in the trial of cases. We have assurances of the support of the community in this movement and we believe the county commissioners will provide the library. Parsonage in the administration of justice is false economy and neither the county commissioners nor the community believe in false economy.

THIRTEENTH INSTALLMENT

SYNOPSIS

Stanford Quest, master criminal of the world, finds that in bringing to the murder of Lord Ashleigh's daughter, he has but just begun a life-and-death struggle with a mysterious master criminal in a hidden but in Professor Ashleigh's garden he has seen an ape skeleton and a living creature, half monkey half man, destroyed by fire. In his room he has appeared black boxes containing notes, signed by a pair of armless hands. Laura, the professor's daughter, suspecting Craig, the professor's servant, of a double murder, the black boxes continue to appear in mysterious fashion. Craig is trapped, but escapes to England, where Quest, Laura and the professor search for him. Quest is murdered by the Hands. Craig, captured, escapes to Port Said. Quest sends his young wife and beyond into the desert. They are captured by Mongars, escape with Craig as their captive and turn him over to Inspector French in San Francisco. He escapes from French in a train wreck and is chased by the party across the Mexican line.

TONGUES OF FLAME

CHAPTER XXVIII.

From the shadows of the trees on the farther side of the river, Craig with strained eyes watched Quest's struggle. He saw him reach Laura, watched him struggle to the bank with her, waited until he had lifted her on to his horse. Then he turned slowly around and faced the one country in the world where freedom was still possible for him. He looked into the wall of darkness, penetrated only at one spot by a little blaze of light. Slowly, with his arm through the bridle of his horse, he limped towards it. As he drew nearer and discovered the source, he hesitated. The light came through the uncurtained windows of a saloon, three long, yellow shafts illuminating the stunted shrubs and sandy paths. Craig kept in the shadow between them and drew a little nearer. From inside he could hear the thumping of a worn piano, the twanging of a guitar, the rattle of glasses, the uproarious shouting of men, the shrill laughter of women. The tired men and the lame horse stole reluctantly a little nearer. Craig listened once more wearily. It was home he longed for so much—and rest. The very thought of the place stung him. Even when he reached the door, he hesitated and instead of entering stood back amongst the shadows. If only he could find any other sort of shelter!

Inside, the scene was ordinary enough. There was a long bar, against which were lounging half a dozen typical Mexican cowpunchers. There was a small space cleared for dancing, at the farther end of which two performers were making wild but vehement music. Three girls were dancing with cowboys, not ungraciously, considering the state of the floor and the frequent discords in the music. One of them—the prettiest—stopped abruptly and pushed her partner away from her. "You have drunk too much, Jose!" she exclaimed. "You cannot dance. You tread on my feet and you lean against me. I do not like it. I will dance with you another night when you are sober. Go away, please for a moment on my feet. Then he looked down upon her with an evil glitter in his eyes. He was tall and thin, with a black mustache and yellow, unpleasant-looking teeth. "So you will not dance any longer with Jose?" he muttered. "Very well, you shall drink with him, then. We will sit together at one of those little tables. Listen, you shall drink wine."

"I do not want to drink wine," she said. "I wish to be left alone," the girl insisted. "All right, go and play cards, if you want to. There is Pietro over there, and Diego. Perhaps you may win some money. They say that drunkards have all the luck."

Jose leered at her. "Presently I will play cards," he said. "Presently I will win all their money and I will buy jewelry for you. Maria—stones that look like diamonds and will sparkle in your neck and in your hair."

She turned disdainfully away. "I do not want your jewelry, Jose," she declared.

He caught her suddenly by the wrist. "Perhaps this is what you want," he cried, as he stooped down to kiss her.

She swung her right hand round and struck him on the face. He staggered for a moment.

There was a red flash which showed through the tan of his cheek. Then he drew a little nearer to her, and before she could escape had passed his long arm around her body. He drew her to the chair placed by the wall. His left hand played with the knife at his belt.

"Maria, little sweetheart," he said, mockingly, "you must pay for that blow. 'Don't be afraid.'"

He went on, as he drew the knife across his leather breeches. "A little scratch across your cheek, not it but the brand of your master, a love token from Jose. Steady now, little Maria!"

The girl struggled violently, but Jose was strong; such braves were common and those of the company who noticed at all, merely laughed at the girl's futile struggles. Jose's arm was already raised with the knife in his hand, when a sudden blow brought a yell of pain to his lips. The knife fell clattering to the floor. He sprang up, his eyes red with fury. A man had entered the door from behind and was standing within a few feet of him, a man with long, pale face, dark eyes, travel-stained, and with the air of a fugitive. A flood of incoherent abuse streamed from Jose's lips. He stooped for the knife. Maria threw herself upon him. The two cowboys had been dancing suddenly intervened. The girl screamed.

"It was Jose's fault!" she cried. "Jose was mad. He would have killed me!"

Craig faced them all with sudden courage. "As I came in," he explained, "that man had his knife raised to stab the girl. You don't allow that sort of thing, do you, here?"

The two cowboys linked their arms through Jose's and led him toward the door.

"The stranger's right, Jose," one of them insisted. "You can't carry a girl up in company."

The girl clutched at Craig's arm. "Sit down here, please," she begged. "Wait."

She disappeared for a moment and came back with a glass full of wine, which she set down on the table.

"Drink this," she invited. "And thank you for saving me."

Craig emptied the glass eagerly. "I just happened to be the first to see him," he said. "They aren't quite wild enough to allow that here, are they?"

"Quiet, Jose! The girls do not like me! The men do not care," she declared. "Jose took me by surprise, though, or I would have killed him. But you are you, and where did you come from?"

"I have just crossed the border," he replied. She nodded understandingly.

"Where they after you?"

"Yes! with a warrant for my arrest!"

She patted his hand.

"You are safe now," she whispered. "We care that much for a United States warrant, and she snapped her slim fingers. 'You shall stay with us for a time. We will take care of you.'"

him into the saloon. They passed Jose in the doorway. He scoffed at them.

"Say, the boss will fire you, Maria, if you waste all your time with that Yankee," he muttered.

Maria drew the red rose from the boom of her dress and placed it in Craig's buttonhole. Then she led him without a word to a seat.

"If these men try any tricks in here," she said, "here'll be trouble."

Almost at that moment they all three entered. Long Jim nodded to Craig in friendly fashion.

"It's all right, cookie," he told them. "Don't you look so scared. This is just a bit of parleyvous business, that's all."

The professor held out a piece of paper. He handed it over to Craig.

"Craig," he announced, "this is a dispatch which I found in Alligues with my letters. It is ad-

Craig shook his head sadly.

"Little girl," he said, "I should like to go with you along that valley and over the hills and forget that I had ever lived in any other world. But I can't do it. There's a child there now, on the ocean, nearer to New York every day, my sister's own child and no one to meet her. And—there are the other things. I have sinned and I must pay."

My God!

The room suddenly rang with Maria's shriek. Through the open window by which they were sitting, an arm wrapped in a serape had suddenly hovered over them. Craig, in starting back, had just escaped the downward blow of the knife, which had buried itself in Maria's arm. She fell back, screaming.

the door there and it gave me a start. For a moment I thought it was Craig back again."

"He's gone to New York, or going tomorrow morning," Jim replied. "I don't think he's so powerful fellow of your company that he'd come round here looking for it."

Quest stroled off again and glanced at his watch as he rejoined the little group.

"Well," he said, "I think we'll turn in. Seven o'clock tomorrow, Inspector. Jim's sending one of the boys with us and we shall catch the Eastern Limited at the junction."

CHAPTER XXIX.

Quest awoke the next morning, stretched out his hand and glanced at the watch by the side of his bed. It was barely six o'clock. He turned over and dozed again, looked again at half-past six, and finally, at a few minutes to seven, rose and made a hasty toilet. Then, in the act of placing his watch in his waistcoat pocket, he gave a sudden start. By its side, half covered by the handkerchief which he had thrown upon the little table, stood a small black box. For a moment he was motionless. Then he stretched out his hand, removed the lid and drew out the usual neatly folded piece of paper.

Even time fights you. It loses that you may lose. —The Hands.

Quest for a moment was puzzled. Then he hurried into the next tent, where the professor was sleeping peacefully.

"Say, professor, what's the time by your watch?" Quest asked, shaking him gently.

The professor sat up and drew his chronometer from under his pillow, considered it for a moment, and then replied: "Seven o'clock," he replied. "Five minutes past, maybe."

Quest nodded.

"That seems all right," he declared. "I'll explain later, professor."

"He hurried out into French's tent and found the inspector just drawing on his shoes.

"French, what's the time?" he demanded.

"Three minutes past seven, or thereabouts," French replied, yawning. "I'm coming right along. We've got lots of time. Three-quarters of an hour ought to do it, the boys say."

They walked outside to the camp, where the cowboys were finishing their breakfast.

"Say, boss," one of them called out, "you're not making that 8:30 train to New York?"

"Why not?" Quest asked, quickly. "It's only three-quarters of an hour's ride, is it?"

"Maybe not," the other replied, "but as it's eight now, your chances ain't looking lively. Kind of overcast, haven't you?"

Both men glanced once more at their watches. Then Quest thrust his back with a little oath.

"Our watches have been set back!" he exclaimed. "The Hands again!"

For a moment they looked at one another, dumfounded. Then Quest turned towards the depot.

"Say, is there any quicker way to the depot?" he inquired of the cowboys.

They heard his question indifferently.

"Fifty dollars," Quest continued, "to anyone who can take me by a quicker route."

One of them rose slowly to his feet.

VISITS BIRPLACE OF THE STUDEBAKERS

Manufacturer of Vehicle Has Humble Beginning in a Small Village.

The Lincoln highway tour for the purpose of taking motion pictures of the entire route from coast to coast brought Roy Sackett, who is in charge of the Studebaker car which forms one of the official squadrons of the Lincoln highway tour, to the Studebaker corporation that he does not resist taking advantage of the opportunity afforded to look upon the birthplace of the famous manufacturing industries in the world. Studebaker was born in the town of Gettysburg, Iowa, and his father, John Studebaker, was a blacksmith and built wagons.

To him, as it has been with others who have followed the growth and development of the Studebaker automobile and automobile industries, it was marvelous and a most striking contrast that so vast an organization could arise from a beginning in a small village. In the space of time, with branches reaching into all parts of the world, having plants in two cities that cover 14 acres and house thousands of employees. He could think only of the country and the people who were the developing industries in the careers of the five brothers who were the real activities in a western state.

When the highway tour came to South Bend, Ind., they will be accorded opportunity to witness in part the continuation of the hopes and aspirations of the Studebakers in the great plants located here, and where the administration offices of the corporation are maintained. The summer headquarters of the corporation are located in Detroit and are used exclusively for production.

As a part of South Bend's welcoming of the party will be given a realistic presentation of the evolution of transportation methods that will show traveling by camels, elephants and other beasts of the East with the introduction of chariots used by nobles of the East.

J. M. Studebaker, Sr., the surviving brother and still in the business, will take a prominent part in the activities and will be in the occasion, and will probably appear either in the Studebaker car or in the Studebaker car.

In making his famous tour of America on the one hand, and in the Studebaker car, he has formed a part of the history of the Studebaker corporation, which has been the Studebaker administration at South Bend.

The consolidation brings together the two oldest and most renowned manufacturers of automobiles in the country and marks the most important development in the history of the motor industry in recent years. The new corporation will have a capital stock of $25,000,000, of which $10,000,000 will be common stock and $15,000,000 will be 7 percent cumulative preferred.

The appraisal to be made. The new corporation will be an increase in the capital stock of the Studebaker corporation from $10,000,000 to $25,000,000, and the new basis of mileage adjustment will be given to the Studebaker corporation.

This announcement, according to the Studebaker corporation, will be the result of the official test by the dealer clubs at widely scattered points in this territory. The new basis of mileage adjustment will be given to the Studebaker corporation.

As an indication of the great interest all over the country in the sale of automobiles, the Studebaker corporation set a new record for shipments of automobiles in the month of May, showing that in the month just closed the shipments of Saxon cars were more than triple the average for the same month last year.

Not only was the showing greater than for the same period a year ago, but it was also known that the month of May was the largest in the history of the Saxon company.

The month of May will set a new record, according to the factory schedule, and it is expected that the Saxon company will be able to maintain this high level of production.

The experience of the Saxon company is identical with that of other automobile concerns with whom the problem is to keep up the production of cars to enable them to make deliveries.

"Although we were enthusiastic about the start of the season," says J. W. Ford, president of the Saxon Motor company, "we must confess that the demand has been expressed both types just as fast as production facilities will admit."

Over 1,500 people visited the Transportation building at the Panama-Pacific exposition on Sunday.

"Every motor enthusiast who comes to San Francisco goes first to the Palace of Transportation," declared J. F. Lindsey, who is in charge of the Chalmers display at the Panama-Pacific exposition. "Every transcontinental limited in travel has its headquarters here. Every feeder road is pouring in the daily quota of tourists who are looking for the Pacific."

The transportation of the Chalmers Motor company has had many of its admirers. Over 1,500 people visited the Chalmers exhibit. The booth is surrounded by a blue velvet, maroon on the outside and blue velvet on the inside.

SMALL ENTRY FEE FOR CITY TENNIS TOURNAMENT JUNE 28

The admission or entrance fee that will be charged for the coming city tennis tournament on the courts at Piedmont Park is exceptionally small, and it is the object of the committee in making the entrance fee small to insure the largest possible attendance and to enter. Seventy-five cents per player is the maximum fee for local players, and in view of the fact that the federation is endeavoring to arrange to give balls free to the first match, the fee is very reasonable.

Already a large number of stars that perform on the city courts have signified their intention of entering, and it is expected that considerable more will enter during this week.

The tournament will start two weeks from Monday, June 28, and will probably run for two weeks, as it will require this long for the various matches to be completed.

The events to be held are: Men's singles, men's doubles, consolation singles and all probably will be held on the city courts. Whether or not these two events are held depends upon the number of entries that are received.

Hold Boys' Tournament. The committee is also very anxious to hold a boys' tournament. That it is to be held on the city courts is not to allow anybody over the age of 14 to enter. This was attempted last year, but on account of lack of entries had to be abandoned. This season it is hoped that the large number of boys who play on the various city courts will come out to the tournament and have one to themselves. There is certainly enough boys in the city who play tennis well enough to enter the tournament, and such can be arranged it should prove interesting.

To the winners in each event, and to the runners-up in the men's singles, and the men's doubles, prizes will be given by the tennis committee of the federation.

Entries will be received from now on at 119 Peachtree street.

Directors of the Baker Motor Vehicle company have approved a plan to merge with the oldest of electrical car manufacturers in the country and mark the most important development in the history of the motor industry in recent years.

Battery signal stealing, which has been the cause of several scandals in the big league baseball, threatens to grow more trouble this season. If anyone is able to prove what is generally suspected, that one of the American League clubs has been accused by the opposing players of "getting signals" as they say, because I am present any proof that our suspicions are well grounded. I think might be funny, though the way the club could hit at home and the feeble manner in which it has been waiting on the road, and almost all the Tigers will take an oath that something out of the way is coming off.

The team I have in mind has won almost all of its home games this year. SIGNAL STEALING NEW ORLEANS ENTRANTS

By Ty Cobb Hints That One
Club Is Guilty of This Unfair Practice This Season.

By Ty Cobb.
(World's Champion All-Round Baseball Player.)

Battery signal stealing, which has been the cause of several scandals in the big league baseball, threatens to grow more trouble this season. If anyone is able to prove what is generally suspected, that one of the American League clubs has been accused by the opposing players of "getting signals" as they say, because I am present any proof that our suspicions are well grounded. I think might be funny, though the way the club could hit at home and the feeble manner in which it has been waiting on the road, and almost all the Tigers will take an oath that something out of the way is coming off.

The team I have in mind has won almost all of its home games this year. I don't know how they have done on the long stand, but it has proved easy for me to make a phenomenal showing in batting has been the chief factor in making the club successful. In the Social Whirl

By Isma Dooly.

The question of the summer trip is being reckoned with now, and the question which for all time has agitated the family at summer time is "a trip." It is easy enough to decide when it is just Mr. and Mrs. who constitute the family with no further question than to decide whether they will go to the seaside or the mountains, or whether they will just stay at home and enjoy the garden, and the "luxury of home," or whether they need the change so much they will go to the resort.

But when added to the family of Mr. and Mrs. who are one or more little folks, for whom milk may have to be sterilized; go-carts and carriages and swinging cradles taken; and black mammy and her "things" taken too, the problem of the summer trip is in a bad humor with everybody and everything.

THE SUMMER TRIP.

But the summer trip, especially in this lovely climate of ours, when the thermometer chooses to go up, has to be considered. The whole family, including sometimes a pet dog, needs a change. They need so much to get in their own minds that it is healthy to take it, though, of course, each and every member of the family in many cases would be better off to stay at home.

The automobile will solve the problem. It is popular, but the automobile and the road runs both have a patriotic duty to perform, and that is to get the people of Georgia to appreciate the glories of scenery, air and natural resources they have around them. When the good roads are opened up will further this new appreciation is coming, and then there will be not only beautiful homes crowning the hills and overlooking valleys in Georgia's northern part, but there will be more summer homes which people will be willing to patronize. There will be well equipped little inn where automobiles can find shelter for the week-end, and where Mr. and Mrs. and the whole family can go and be assured of comfort. But all these good things are not coming until people explore and find out for themselves how beautiful their own state is, the possibilities for summer outings in that atmosphere of mountain in which many parts of north Georgia abound.

This is particularly the month for

The open air play, at which the Habersham players made their debut in "As You Like It," has been raised enthusiastically, for no amateur entertainment yet essayed in Atlanta has had better production. Hard study was demonstrated in the fact that the participants neither hesitated nor lagged in their parts. Action was sustained with professional precision, and the details were in no way neglected. The setting was beautiful in the trees which shade that picturesque site on Peachtree street. The audience assembled there Thursday afternoon will return to the "Forest of Arden" whenever the Habersham players summon them. Miss Carolyn Cobb directed and rehearsed the players. Mrs. William Lawton Ford assisted, and the proceeds of the play go toward the building fund for the Joseph Habersham chapter house, D. A. R.

PRETTY COSTUMES.
A wedding gown which will be worn by a June bride, and one which is marked by a youthful simplicity, white tulle and charming satin. Double skirts of tulle fall over the skirt and the corsage of tulle is concealed by a bodice of satin. The long sleeves are of tulle, and a square train finished in the skirt. The veil will be caught to the hair with pearl pins, and the bride will carry a very small French bouquet of lilies and pink rosebuds.

An Atlanta bride has chosen for her afternoon calling gown a voile gown in a shade of royal blue, which will be most becoming to her blonde tresses. The gown falls gracefully over the shoulders and is finished with a wide band of white lace and a wide band of white lace and a wide band of white lace. ITALIAN ADVANCE Invaders Are Drawing Near to Trent—Austrians, Re- treating, Reported to Have Blown Up Strong Fort.

London, June 12.—The Italian advance on the east bank of the Isonzo river. In addition to occupying the important town of Monfalcone, the Italians claim to have captured the Austrian town of Gradiska near Gorizia.

Retreating before Italian troops near Rovereto, the Austrians are reported to have evacuated and to have blown up the fort of Pustecchia. This position was considered one of the strongest of the Austrian defenses.

AUSTRIAN TOWNS ABOUT TO FALL.
Verona, Italy, June 12.—(Via Chiasso and Paris, June 12, 12:30 a. m.)—The Italian advance on the east bank of the Isonzo river. In addition to occupying the important town of Monfalcone, the Italians claim to have captured the Austrian town of Gradiska near Gorizia.

Retreating before Italian troops near Rovereto, the Austrians are reported to have evacuated and to have blown up the fort of Pustecchia. This position was considered one of the strongest of the Austrian defenses.

PORT EVACUATED BY AUSTRIANS.
Milan, June 12.—(Via Paris)—The Austrians have evacuated and blown up Port Pustecchia on the Pustecchia river near Rovereto, according to a Secolo dispatch. The fortress is a mile from the Isonzo, which has been occupied by the Italians, and was one of the most formidable Austrian defenses in that section of the Isonzo.

GALLANT MOVE BY BERSAGLIERI.
The Twelfth regiment of Bersaglieri, who virtually fought four days continuously against the Austrian defenses, Tolmino, had the heaviest losses of any Italian detachment since the beginning of the war.

Colonel de Rossi, twice wounded, refused to be removed from the fighting line until he saw his men safely across the river. He was killed.

Colonel de Rossi was promoted to the rank of general before the war broke out, but asked the war office to postpone his promotion, as he desired to lead his regiment under fire. When King Victor Emmanuel visited him, Colonel de Rossi said he was proud of his Bersaglieri. Although outnumbered, he told the king, his men succeeded in retreating in good order, and none was taken prisoner.

AUSTRIAN ARMY BOMBARD TOWNS.
Rome, June 12.—(Via Paris)—Austria's two enemy aeroplanes dropped bombs today on Pola di Bart then threw bombs on Polignano where a woman was killed, and finally on Roncole. It is officially announced.

ITALIANS REPULSED.
AUSTRIANS CLAIM.
Vienna, June 12.—(Via London).—The Austrian war office has issued the following in regard to the Italian advance on the Isonzo.

The enemy have been isolated infantry and artillery engagements on the Isonzo river. The Austrians have gained footing on the eastern bank at Monfalcone and Karfreit (Cheretto). The Italian forces have been repulsed on the eastern bank near Pola di Bart.

The enemy is slowly sending forces to several frontier districts—Cortina d'Ampezzo, Pieve di Primiero and Bormio.

AUSTRIAN SOLDIERS FIGHTED IN ITALY.
Rome, June 12.—(Via Paris, June 12, 12:15 a. m.)—A confidential circular from an Austrian officer contained the following: "The Austrians have been fighting in Italy."

part of the Austrian front was broken because of the lack of Austrian soldiers, who are taken to task for failure to hold the line. The circular stated that the Austrians were retreating, and that the Italian troops were advancing.

It was in this manner that a large part of our front was broken. However, it is known that other detachments of these troops failed to hold the line. Detailed information of what occurred will be developed by a string of inquiry which has already been begun. However, the fact is made known now for the benefit of all and it may be added that infractions of duty will be punished by court-martial.

The order, which is signed by General Rohr, general of cavalry, closes with a tribute to the troops on the front, he says, will make good this defeat.

GRADISKA TAKEN ON TUESDAY.

CHINA-JAPAN CRISIS COSTLY FOR RUSSIA
Washington, June 12.—The sudden collapse of the victorious westward march of the Russian armies was directly attributable to the recent crisis between China and Japan, according to information which has reached officials here.

At the beginning of the war Russia is said to have turned to Japan for war material. Japan was in a position to supply Russia with arms and even cannon after the successful capture of the Japanese navy. The Japanese government regarded it as prudent to retain these military supplies as a precautionary measure, and the effect was to deprive Russia of the Russian front.

In that emergency pressure was brought to bear upon Japan through her allies so that it is understood the Japanese will supply her again being established.

CONFERENCE IS REQUESTED Leaders to Bring About a New Union of All Mex- icans to Restore Peace.

El Paso, Texas, June 12.—General Villa, in a note to President Wilson, expresses willingness "to invite a new union of all Mexicans . . . to work together to insure the triumph of the revolutionary principles, especially the agrarian problem and the extension of instruction among the poorer classes."

Another note signed by Villa has been dispatched to Carranza, asking the latter to agree to a conference of leaders in Mexico "to unite and organize." The note says propositions are being placed before Emiliano Zapata and General Gonzalez Garza.

Wilson will not discuss the reported ousting of Garza from power at Mexico City.

The communications to President Wilson and General Carranza were formulated at a meeting of Villa and Carranza at Aguascalientes.

Villa's reply to President Wilson is believed. It explains that Villa makes no claim to Aguascalientes, but is living in his own name, leaving the government to the hands of all factions whose political tendencies are represented by the Carranza government and supported by the army.

Fourteenth Annual Southern Golf Tournament Here

Pelicans Bunch Four Hits With Moran's Wild Throw :: Billy Smith's Corps of Hurling Talent :: Ain't There Nuttin This Here Royston Romper Can't Do?

Scoring Three Runs in Second, While Weaver Holds the Crackers Safely—Brief Rally in Ninth.

TODAY'S GAME WILL BE CALLED BY PLAY. Today's game between the Atlanta Crackers and the Royston Bombers will be called by play at Dick Jemison's studio.

New Orleans, June 12.—(Special.)—Johnnie Dobb's men took the enemy benches, guns, foot and horse, and in so doing, Weaver pitched a much better game than did Kelly this afternoon, though Kelly did not allow any hits at all until the eighth, when he walked a whole square.

Weaver did not do even this. They got one hit off him in the fifth inning, but that was all until the ninth. Buck walked only one man, allowed one hit, and did not a man from Atlanta get past first base. In the ninth the Crackers got a pair of runs, their total for the day, two.

Crackers Rally. Buck walked Jenkins, first up, who went in to hit in place of Pitcher Hiett and Moran sent him around with a two-bagger to right center. Cobb hit the ball and threw it to Knaupp who tried for the runner at home, but he hit the runner and Jenkins scored and Moran went to third before the ball could be recovered. He scored immediately afterward when Williams lined to center. Here Weaver tightened up and retired the side without further damage.

But the valiant effort of the Crackers in the final season was in vain, for the Pelicans had won the game in the second inning by making four successive hits count for three runs, and the eighth put over more for good score.

Billy Smith sent Right-Hander Hiett to the mound in an effort to get the Crackers out. The last time he did so he hit them in the first inning, but he could not do it yesterday.

Hiett's first pitch in the opening inning, opened the proceedings with a walk to Moran, who was sent to first. He was caught off first on an extreme balk motion throw by Hiett and no one was able to do anything more.

Pela Big Second. In the second, Hiett's first up, was out on a grounder to third. Then Higgins doubled to left field and went to third when Fowler beat out an infield hit. Thomas here hit to center for one, and Weaver walked and Knaupp tried to head off Pezold at third base, but he was too late.

Home and Thomas was on third before the ball was out. Here Hiett's first up, was out on a grounder to third. Then Higgins doubled to left field and went to third when Fowler beat out an infield hit. Thomas here hit to center for one, and Weaver walked and Knaupp tried to head off Pezold at third base, but he was too late.

SCIENCE AND DEAR-SCIENCE UP-TO-DATE

How to Tell EDIBLE Mushrooms From the POISONOUS

THE one obstacle in the way of making general use of the mushroom as a food—and it is a nutritious food that may be obtained at low cost—is the fear of mistaking the poisonous varieties through their similarity in appearance.

What are the distinguishing features by which one may decide between the edible and injurious varieties?

In the first place, if you are planning to grow mushrooms, the simplest and easiest way of deciding which varieties to select is to send your samples to the Department of Agriculture at Washington, where they will be passed upon by experts and all the information you may require sent to you without cost.

But this means of deciding between varieties obviously involves too great a delay for those who intend picking mushrooms for their next meal. For these there are numerous tests which may be made immediately.

An important item to remember is that the common edible mushroom has pink gills when young and purplish-brown or black gills when mature. All species with yellow or white gills should be avoided by the novice. Some of these varieties are edible, but they should be passed upon by an expert before they are used as food.

The common mushroom of commerce usually is found in the open and grassy glades, never in the forests. Therefore, one should be exceedingly chary about picking mushrooms in shady spots or in the woods unless they have an expert knowledge of the varieties they are seeking. When conditions are favorable the edible mushroom may be picked in midsummer in old pastures and on lawns. They are more often found, however, in the autumn.

The variety about which there is no question as to food value grows about three inches tall, has a fleshy cap about three inches broad. This cap generally is white, but sometimes reddish or brownish above and pink beneath.

Remember that its stem does NOT rise from a caplike base. Also, it has a best pathed in the "button" stages—that is, before the cap has expanded.

Most of the poisonous species have a fleshy cap that is whitish, moist and clammy to the touch. Their stems are usually ringless or nearly so. When they have gills they are a pale pink white. An offensive odor even more than their clammy feeling mark them as being harmful.

The surest test is to nibble at them without swallowing any. The poisonous varieties have a peculiar and disagreeable taste that is immediately evident. It is easily recognized after tasting it once.

There are a few species that are sometimes edible and sometimes not, but these should be left alone for safety. This is true of the variety known as "amanitas." They have tall stems surmounted by a cap whose surface ranges from a glossy white to a gray, orange and brown. The gills are at any rate, it must be remembered that for a novice to experiment freely with mushrooms is about as safe an occupation as the handling of gunpowder.

Mushrooms are a highly nutritious food at little cost, but they must be selected only with the greatest care. It has been said that they are as rich in food value as meat. This, however, is not proved by an analysis, which shows they contain no considerable amount of fat.

The three pictures to the left show the edible variety of mushroom in three stages. The small drawing is a section of the infant mushroom, the next a mature example and the third a section of the fully developed mushroom. Externally it is pale brown, dry, often silky, never viscid. The cuticle peels readily away, as shown, and the gills underneath grow from white to pink or rose-colored and then brown-black. They are usually more or less free from the stem, which is slightly puffy up to the middle, but never hollow, and has a flaccid ring near the middle. The poisonous mushroom shown in the two views at the right has pale, clay-colored gills, an offensive odor and a clammy or viscid top.

white and the stem the same color. They grow in the woods and their beauty often makes them a snare to the novice.

Mushrooms should be gathered when young and be eaten fresh. They should never be served when they begin to decay. They should be cleaned thoroughly and kept in slightly salted water before using.

How Explosives Are Selected for War

THE history of the modern explosives used in the great war dates back to 1888, when smokeless powders for service became a possibility. Up to that time gunpowder had been the explosive used both as a charge for the gun and as a bursting charge for shells, and although, as a result of thirty years' work, the forms of gunpowder used had been so beautifully fitted to the work that had to be done as to render the powder charge a "propellant" the result of the firing of which could be absolutely predicted, the fact that more than one-half the weight of the powder was driven from the gun in the form of smoke became an insuperable objection.

In 1888 the largest gun we had weighed 110 tons, fired a charge of 960 pounds of prism powder, threw a shell weighing 1,700 pounds, and was 16.25 inches in diameter, being, therefore, larger than the 16-inch gun the Germans are supposed to possess, while our own largest guns are now the 15-inch on the new superdreadnoughts throwing a 2,000-pound shell with 50 per cent greater muzzle velocity than the old 16.25-inch gun using powder. The secret of this increase in efficiency is that the charge of the old 110-ton gun had not only to drive out the projectile but also some 500 pounds of smoke, while less than 50 per cent of the charge was effective.

The introduction of rapid-fire machine guns made the smoke trouble still more serious and rendered a smokeless powder a necessity.

In any successful explosive certain conditions have to be fulfilled. One must be able to concentrate in a small space bodies which will act upon each other independently of the air with enormous rapidity, forming the largest possible volumes of gas, which, having to find way for itself, gives the explosive effect. If this change takes an appreciable time the body can be used as a "propellant" in a gun, and gunpowder is of this character. When, however, the change takes place practically instantaneously it cannot be used in a gun and is used in high-explosive shells, bombs, torpedoes and mines, and such bodies we call "high explosives," gun cotton and nitroglycerin being examples of this class. When, during the formation of the gas from the solid in explosion, other solid compounds are formed as well, the solids are blown out in fine particles and form a cloud, smoke. But if only gases are produced the explosion is smokeless. Gunpowder on being fired gives more than half its weight as solids, and therefore forms clouds of smoke. Gun cotton is resolved entirely into gases and gives no smoke.

How Wounded Horses Are Nursed

WHEREVER it is possible wounded horses in the European war are given almost as careful attention as are the soldiers. The army council of Great Britain is reported to work out its plans for attending injured horses with just as great pains as it does wounded troopers.

To every division and cavalry brigade is attached a mobile veterinary section. Each consists of one officer and twenty-two trained men of the army veterinary corps, all mounted and fully equipped with all the necessary veterinary means. Their function is to relieve the field units of sick and inefficient animals. They are the connecting link between the field units and veterinary hospitals. The patients they obtain after proper first aid treatment, are conveyed to the nearest railway and dispatched by train to the advanced veterinary hospital, the mobile veterinary section finding the party required to attend to the patient's wants during the railway journey.

Then comes the veterinary hospital, ten in number, and situated at different points along the line of communication. Each is organized to deal with 100 cases, and has a staff of officers and trained men of the army veterinary corps. All necessary veterinary medicines, instruments and surgical means for dealing with the patients are provided. The cases are received into the advance hospital, and from there, after treatment, drafted, according to their severity, to the hospitals further down the line. The cases which end in complete recovery are discharged to the remount department for release to the fighting troops, but many horses discharged from the hospital are found to require further rest before they are fit for release. These are drafted to the convalescent horse depot.

The horses are treated with just the same care and skill as are shown to wounded soldiers. They are given chloroform and other anaesthetics before they are operated upon by skilled officers. The allies' convalescent horse depot has been established in one of the healthiest places in France, and it covers an area of twenty miles. Here the patients turn to grass in small, well-sheltered paddocks, receiving extra feed, and they are under the supervision of officers of the army veterinary corps. By this means a very large number of animals which would otherwise be lost to the state are saved and again become thoroughly efficient troop horses.

At the conclusion of the China-Japanese war a monument was consecrated with much ceremony in Tokio to the memory of the horses lost in the war. The monument cost $40,000.

At the conclusion of the Russo-Japanese war the Japanese held a funeral service in Miyagi for the horses killed in the war with Russia.

When the Germans bombarded Louvain the first time bleeding, riderless horses galloped into the town in the front of the Belgian advance guard which had been in action.

The Lys victory in mid-October was due to a French horse. Two thousand French cuirassiers made a long detour and came to a point where they decided to cross, although the stream was deep and the current rapid. A courageous horseman swam the river with a rope about his shoulders, and when he reached the other side tied the rope to a tree. The rest of the men made their way over by holding to the rope. They got across without alarming the enemy.

Then they charged. It was a surprise. The enemy gave way. Then the infantry quick-marched to the river front, crossed on speedily erected pontoon bridges and pressed the advantage so that the Germans withdrew from Lys.

J. Stuenkel, English lance corporal, tells this story: "One man of the 11th Lancers I found lying on his back with his eyes staring at the skies. He was dead without doubt. Standing over him was his horse, without a wound. It was looking into his face every few minutes, and then sighing in a pitiful way that sounded just like a human being in an excess of grief. To hear that poor animal was enough to bring tears to the eyes of the most hardened of men."

Do You Dine With Your Plants?

DO YOU ever think of inviting your plants to dinner?

As expert in plant life who took a large number of samples and supplied half of them with nitrogenous food in the form of roast beef arrived at the following facts:

Of the plants that he fed, 99 per cent more survived than of the same number that were not fed in this way; their stems weighed 41 per cent more, they excelled the starved plants in the number of their seeds by 141 per cent, and in the aggregate weight of their seeds by 279 per cent.

Other scientists who have fed these plants with aphids of similar small insects have secured like results.

New Electric Lamp to Save Miners' Lives

MINERS at last have been equipped with a practical electric lamp—a lamp that probably will do more to prevent mine disasters than any life-saving device brought forth by modern progress.

Mine fires in the past have been the cause of untold and inestimable loss of natural resources, yet despite the efforts of inventors and engineers nothing more satisfactory in the nature of a portable lamp for miners was brought forth than a developed and improved "Davy" lamp, in which the flame above the underground worker's forehead is protected by wire gauze, which conducts away the heat before it can penetrate to the more or less inflammable gases which may be trapped in the atmosphere of the mine. It is a simple apparatus and dependable within limits, but in this day of mechanical perfection it is crude, an archaic relic.

The new Edison mine lamp battery is contained in a small nickel-steel can of convenient size and weight, to be strapped to the back of the belt. It is tightly covered, and from it a flexible tube carrying the insulated wire is brought up over the back of the head to the incandescent lamp fastened to the front of the miner's cap. It is a "fool-proof" apparatus, which requires no attention whatever from the miner, and which he cannot damage without actually breaking it open, for the outfit, properly charged, and with the current turned on, is handed to him at the mouth of the mine with the cover locked. It will continue to produce light until the battery is rendered when he emerges from the workings, or until the battery is exhausted.

Those in charge of the batteries have nothing to do but unlock the covers, hook them up to the power source and recharge for the next day's work. The materials in the battery are permanent, the roughest jarring produces no ill effects, and the battery does not have to be fully exhausted before it is recharged. Even such mistakes as the reversal of the charge does not permanently injure the battery, and it may be left for indefinite periods charged, uncharged or semi-charged without appreciable loss. Specific gravity readings of the electrolyte are unnecessary, and the only care required, other than that of recharging, is the replenishing of the electrolyte about once every ten months and the occasional addition of distilled water to replace the water lost by evaporation. Other parts of the battery are unchanged by its operation. The plates never have to be renewed.

New Use for Fireless Cooker

IF A peddler calls at your door in the near future and offers to sell you soups, meats or vegetables, piping hot and ready to serve, do not be surprised.

For the business of bringing your dinner to you is a new and rapidly growing industry. If it continues as it is expected to do you soon will not be compelled to consider your dinner at all—you may select it from the traveling cafe that will call at your house daily, or as often as you desire.

A recent improvement in the fireless cooker has made this work possible. They now are being used in conjunction with a co-operative kitchen plan in a New Jersey city. The new cooker is composed of numerous compartments in which several articles of food may be cooked at the same time.

When the meal is ready it is carried—still in the original compartment in which it was cooked—to the home of the purchaser. In some cases the contents of one cooker are divided between two or more families, thus cutting down the cost of the home meals materially.

Many plans are being worked out through which the plan may be used to fight the high cost of living. The most practical of these is the one suggested by a woman who has had her main meal delivered to her daily by means of the cooker. She suggests purchasing a number of the cookers, taking orders each day from a number of families, preparing the food ordered and delivering it at a stated time. "By this means I can deliver just the kind and variety of food required at a cost far below the cost of preparing it in each home," said the woman, who hopes to make a business of "home cooking."

New Facts You May Not Know

SANDSTONE can absorb a gallon or more of water to the cubic foot of rock.

WITH 8,000 telephones one New York office building holds the world's record.

PARAFFIN paper tubes have been invented to aid the users of bubbling drinking fountains.

ABOUT 900 colors are known to dyes, of which only about 100 are made in the United States.

TO CONVERT an ax into a pick is the purpose of an attachment patented by a West Virginia inventor.

MICHIGAN is the leading state in the manufacture of sand line brick, followed by Minnesota and New York.

WHAT is believed to be the largest conveyor belt in the world, 383 feet long by 98 inches wide, has been made for an Ohio stone quarry.

Why You Use a Tooth Brush

A GOOD tooth brush if used conscientiously should not be in use more than two weeks at a time, and it is better to keep two in use so that each may have a period of drying out and airing. It never pays to buy too cheap a brush if the price is at the expense of the quality. In the first place a poor set of bristles will not do their work well and in the second place loosely fastened bristles are very dangerous if they slip down the throat where they may catch and decay or penetrate the walls of the digestive tract. Always wash out the brush thoroughly after each application, and, by the way, a new brush should be soaked in a weak solution of bicarbonate of soda for two hours both to disinfect it from shop handling and to set the bristles so that they will not fall out so readily.

The teeth should be brushed at night, after each meal, and upon rising. It is particularly important to clean them the last thing before retiring so that food particles will not remain over night when the mouth saliva is not active enough to prevent it.

During a long illness the teeth should be carefully cleaned when they cannot receive attention from a dentist. If this were done fewer teeth troubles would be laid to the ailment, which is not much more to blame than neglect of the mouth. See that the mouth is constantly washed out with a weak bicarbonate of soda, which can be prepared by dissolving a teaspoonful of the bicarbonate (ordinary baking soda) in a pint of water and bottling it for use. Most authorities consider this better than too frequent use of the hydrogen peroxide solution, which are not always good for the teeth.

Frightful Inventions to Take Life

THE war of the future will be the work of the inventor, even more than it is today. Science, mechanics and electricity have, as we all know, revolutionized modern warfare to a terrible degree. Talk to men who remember the Crimean war and they will tell you that the present conflict is not war; it is wholesale murder, fearful, horrible and inhuman. The wars of the future, however, if the scientist is to be believed, will be even more destructive.

At present he is experimenting with heat rays. If, he contends, light rays can be thrown upon a hostile position with the searchlights, why cannot heat rays be similarly reflected; and if heat can be sent to a distance, why not the hottest rays possible—namely, those of the oxy-acetylene torch? Before such a fiery glare fortresses of steel and stone would melt, the biggest gun would crumble down into pools of steel, and whole regiments of men might, with one blast, be shriveled into ashes.

Neither do scientists consider it outside the bounds of possibility in the future to devise means of detonating explosives at a distance by wireless waves. The latter at present scatter in every direction, but the day may come when it will be practicable to restrict them to only one direction, so that they may be aimed; and it is not too far-fetched to predict that some future general, touching a button, will send speeding to their target, which will be, perhaps, an entire army division, wireless impulses so powerful that they will electrocute every man within their range.

In regard to big guns, experts say that the limit is by no means reached with the manufacture of seventeen-inch firing mortars. They prophesy sixty-inch and even eighty-inch guns will be able to shoot sixty or eighty miles, the range being given by aviators signaling by wireless.

Again, plans are already under way for the construction of monster submarines, with a cruising radius from London to New York. They will be able to carry batteries of torpedoes and ample fuel and provisions for the long cruise. They will thus gain some of the independence of land possessed by dreadnoughts, for even they must visit coaling stations or be attended by colliers.

The next half-century, indeed, may see battleships swept from the seas, and some nations holding the mastery of the ocean by virtue of a fleet of submarines.

Maple Syrup From Bark

ON THE theory that the flavor of the sugar maple is contained in the rough outside bark as well as the sap of the tree, a West Virginia man has patented a process for making maple syrup that contains an extract from the bark.

Superintendent at Annapolis May Be Made Defendant—Alleged That Fullam Has Made Threats.

Annapolis, Md., June 12.—That Rear Admiral Fullam, superintendent of the naval academy, himself will be further drawn into the proceedings before the court of inquiry investigating irregularities in connection with examinations, was indicated by today's testimony.

Presidents of three classes of midshipmen gave practically the same testimony to the effect that at a conference, with the superintendent, under seven midshipmen had been recommended by him for dismissal under recommendation in examinations. Admiral Fullam said if the navy department did not back him up in the matter of the present investigation, he would be inclined to resign.

Rear Admiral Collier, who further remarked that he would rather go to sea in command of a collier than stay at Annapolis under such circumstances.

There were four presidents and a president-elect of the new first-class present at this conference. The three who were cross-examined today by the court were: Richard R. M. Broadfoot, president of the first class, who was the first witness to testify, that he had been told by the superintendent that the superintendent had made the statement attributed to him.

Midshipman H. R. Broadfoot, president of the former second class, and R. H. Holcombe, president of the present first class, testified to having heard the admiral make the statement.

The Man who really sent Italy to War

Elena Duse, the Tragedienne, With Whom All Italy Sympathized When d'Annunzio Revealed in a Book the Secrets of Their Love.

Gabriele d'Annunzio, Beloved and Then Despised, Became Once More the Idol of His People Through His Fiery Denunciations of Austria and Eloquent Appeals for Battle—Scorned Because of His Heartless Treatment of the Great Duse, He Is Again a Hero.

EVERY country has its hero—its idol—in time of war. In England today Lord Kitchener is affectionately called "K." and is looked upon as the man whose genius will save British arms from defeat. In Germany they speak of Kaiser Wilhelm in words akin to reverence, and the name of King Albert is ever on the lips of the Belgians. France has her General Joffre, Austria her Franz Josef, and Turkey her Enver Bey Pasha. The eyes of Russia are turned toward Grand Duke Nicholas.

Italy's Own Idol.

Italy, throwing her fortunes into the greatest of all wars, chose an idol different from any of the other countries. He is not the king, though Victor Emmanuel is beloved by his people; he is not Premier Salandra, the leader of the war cabinet; he has not the epaulets of a general or the insignia of an admiral. The man of the hour is Signor Gabriele d'Annunzio, poet and dramatist.

Julius Caesar, returning from his triumphant conquest of Gaul, received no more fervid greeting from Rome than did d'Annunzio on his arrival there recently after several years of self-imposed exile.

He came to Rome an avowed agent of Mara. He preached war to his countrymen—and they were in a receptive mood. He stirred them to frenzy by his fiery denunciations of Austria, and when war finally was declared it was said that no one person had hastened the decree so swiftly as this famous writer.

Changes of Time.

That time changes everything is true in the case of Italy's love for the poet. Fifteen years ago, when Eleonora Duse, the great actress, declared that she would kill d'Annunzio, her Italian countrymen applauded her and condemned the poet's book, "Il Fuoco" ("Fire"), for whose heroine Duse herself admitted she was the unconscious model.

Both were artists. Both loved and understood the things that are of art—which alone served to draw them outside the commonplace currents of affairs and place them in a world by themselves. To the man, indeed, art was the only thing. It was the substance and the end of life. Everything might be, must be, sacrificed to it. But to the woman there was one thing greater than art—and that was love. To her strenuously vibrating nature a play, a book, a song were as nothing compared with the one mighty reality which womanlike she worshipped.

But the balance was too uneven; the scales had to turn. D'Annunzio grew tired. And one day he told her so.

"For a long time Duse struggled to recover from this soul-destroying, heart-deadening experience," D'Annunzio, said his critics, spent the interval in writing it all down in the novel which he well knew would be read the world over, and which he intended should add an additional curb to his stature as an artist.

It is unlikely that any readers of the story failed to comprehend the cry of the humiliated, deserted woman: "He has stolen my love and sold it! I will kill him!"

D'Annunzio apologized—two columns of apology, dripping with self-advertisement. He said he didn't mean Duse. Again she gave him the lie.

Judge which was right by the following summary:

The two main characters in "Fire" are Stelio Effrena, a poet, and Foscarina, a tragic actress. Their love is not led up to, but assumed at the start. Foscarina finds herself attracted to the youth by "a limitless love and terror." Effrena at the same time experiences an "intellectual pleasure."

In response to her admiration of his work he tells her that she is the artistic stimulus.

"It seems to me at times," he says to her, "that you have the power to impart some nameless but divine quality to the things that are born in my brain and to make them appear even to my own eyes remote and adorable. You reproduce in me at times the reverent amazement of the sculptor, who, having in the evening borne into the temple the images of the gods which he has wrought with heated labor and patient hand, returns the next morning to find them exalted on their pedestals and enveloped in a cloud of fragrant divinity that transforms the common material from which his hands have fashioned them."

Enter the Other Woman.

Then there appears another woman—Donatella Arvale, young, beautiful, gifted with a marvelous voice, and a friend of Stelio Effrena. She interrupts Effrena. The three spend an evening together. And at the end of it "Donatella Arvale and Stelio Effrena looked at each other with confused glances. And their faces, each reflecting the other's feeling, burned as though they had been leaning over a furnace or a crater."

After this the apprehension that La Foscarina has felt when with Effrena deepens into terror. She knows no further happiness. She lives through a period of deep abasement and humiliation, longing for death, yet consumed by her love for the poet.

At last she tells him that she longs to die. Indolently he asks her why.

"First, because you hate me," she replies.

"Do not torment yourself," he says.

But she no longer has the power to move him deeply.

Doubts His Love.

A distrust of his faithfulness to her enters her mind.

"A horrible fear possessed her each time that she saw him go, each time that she saw him come. Departing, he might be on the way to some unknown love. Arriving, he might perhaps intend to take a last farewell of her."

"Do you think often of Donatella Arvale, Stelio?" she asked him suddenly one day.

"Yes, sometimes," he replied, after a minute's hesitation, feeling a repugnance for all lies and the necessity of resolving that love must transcend all little tricks and pretensions and become for him a source of strength and not of weakness, a free agreement, not a heavy chain.

"The woman walked forward without averting, but she had lost the sense of feeling throughout her body except for that terrible beating of her heart which shook her from neck to heel."

Thus little by little La Foscarina realizes the extent to which she has sacrificed herself to the poet. A younger woman seems to him more beautiful. Her own great love kindles in him no adequate response. Even the sacred moments when she has confided to him the bitterest passages of her own life story have for him, she suspects, only a literary value.

"Do you remember that evening of the tempest?" asked Stelio one day. "How sweet you were, Fosca! A little earlier, on the Rialto bridge, I had found a motive; I had translated the speech of the elements

Gabriele d'Annunzio, the Poet, Who Has Reclaimed the Friendship of His Countrymen.

D'Annunzio as a War Poet

THE prohibition by the Italian government in 1912 of the collected edition of Gabriele d'Annunzio's war poems, contributed to Italian newspapers, was due chiefly to the unflattering allusions to certain European powers contained in one of the poems, entitled "A Ballad of the Dardanelles."

D'Annunzio's reference to Austria and Emperor Francis Joseph was most bitter. The poem dealt with episodes in the history of Austrian-Italian relations—the troubles at Mantua, when Austria endeavored to hold down her Italian subjects after the unsuccessful revolution of 1848.

Wrote d'Annunzio:

But one is more outraged than all the others. It is the saintly hanging angel of the eternal gallows. O gloomy Mantua, O stones of Belfiore, O ditches of Lombardy, O curving Bay of Trieste, was ever greater marvel seen?

The modesty of the two-headed eagle, which vomits forth like the vulture the undigested flesh of the corpses!

Yet more portentous! The hangman's rope, with its slipknot, which is now transformed into a girde of virtue to surround the foul old executioner, while every night in his sleep he is cuffed by that severed hand loaded with rings which made a glory field of Croatia.

The "severed hand loaded with rings" was taken presumably by the Italian censor to mean the hand of some Italian nobleman, cut off as he hung upon the gallows by a Croatian soldier.

Doest thou know what a motive is? A little stream from which there may grow a crowd of rivers, a little seed from which may come a glory of forests, a little spark from which may come an endless chain of fire, a nucleus productive of infinite force.

"There is not in the world of force anything more potent, more effectual. And to an active mind there is no higher joy than a development of this form of energy. A joy? Yes, dear friends, but also sometimes a horror."

All this and more is what Duse read and cried against. This stripping aside of all reserve, this portrayal of a heroine with great and eyes, "no longer young," with a fatal capacity for loving; this pitiless recital of the painful, sordid childhood of the great actress; the melancholy romance of her absolute abandonment of herself to the man who accepted her great love and found in it—a "motive."

The unutterable cruelty of it all, supplemented by the novelist's airy denial that he had definite models for the characters in his book, excited Signora Duse into a frenzy. Time after time she sent for d'Annunzio to come to her. Repeatedly he failed her. To a man the writers of Italy and France espoused her cause. M. de Provost bitterly attacked d'Annunzio in the Paris prints.

But this is another day. The people of Italy, facing a crisis, forgot all else save the destiny of their country. Benjamin Disraeli, the Earl of Beaconsfield, once said that "time is the great physician." In the case of d'Annunzio "war" might be substituted for "time."

Readjustment of Teachers' Salary System Serious Problem Before Education Board

Readjustment of the salary system is one of the most serious questions now confronting the board of education. Like every other department of the educational program, either of the municipality, state or nation, the business or financial base upon which the system must be adjusted to meet the changes that ensue; the growth of the system, the increased facilities and complex situations arise thereto.

When these moments of adjustment come and plans are set forth for discussion, there will always arise that difference of opinion that creates interest; sets people to thinking and brings about a general exchange of knowledge and thought that is helpful in the progress of any institution.

When it is considered that no institution of our democratic form of government is more an integral part of it than the public school system, the need for a general expression of public sentiment in regard to the school becomes the greatest factor governing the fulfillment of their purpose. But this public sentiment in expression should carry with it some knowledge of the department of the school system under discussion, as well as some knowledge of the plans in this direction as pursued in school systems in other cities.

The salary adjustment affecting so directly the most vital force in the school—the teacher body—cannot be weighed and considered too seriously. It involves the interests of the teachers, individually and collectively, and calls for the most painstaking dealing with them. The fact that the majority of the teachers are women, who have no other professional calling, and there is no more serious reason for their leaving the school than the desire to improve their financial position, throws upon the board of education and related schools the responsibility for their life.

When, therefore, the board is faced with this public responsibility task a step which they believe is the right one and work for a change that should not be accepted impulsively as one radical or revolutionary, but rather one commendably evolutionary in purpose, till proven otherwise, and open to suggestion from the public itself.

The Result.
The resolutions which have opened the question of readjustment of salaries follow:

Be it resolved by the board of education, that the right of the board of education, 1915, for the years 1915-16, and thereafter until this resolution is rescinded, the following scale of salaries for principals, assistant principals and grade teachers be maintained:

PERMITS ARE SOUGHT BY 17 LOCKER CLUBS

City Authorities Believe Other Three Clubs Will Apply for Permits.

Seventeen of the twenty locker clubs of Atlanta have filed with the police committee of permits and applications for renewals of their permits when the general council grants permits at the first meeting in July. The other three clubs are expected to file their applications before the committee meets Wednesday afternoon to consider applications for permits for locker clubs, near beer saloons and pool rooms.

Under an ordinance recently passed by general council applicants for locker club privileges are required to sign under oath a score of questions relative to the officers, directors, members and rules under which the club proposes to operate.

The clubs that have already made application for permits are the following:

Transportation club, Metropolitan club, Capital City club, Beavers club, Atlanta Turn Verein, Atlanta club, Atlanta Athletic club, Moose club, M. & M. club, Standard club, David Miller club, Edmond Driving club, Elks club, the H. F. S. Danos society, Orpheus-American club, Eagles club and Owl club.

The police committee has received 17 applications for renewals of near beer licenses. There are about 25 near beer saloons in Atlanta and it is said that practically all of them will ask to have their licenses renewed.

During the past week members of the police committee, headed by Chairman Edwin Johnson, visited many of the locker clubs and near beer saloons and before the applications are granted they will make a tour of inspection of the remaining clubs of the city.

TOOK OLD MAN HOME TO STEAL HIS WATCH, CHARGE THE POLICE

On the charge of robbing J. S. Boyd, of East Fifth street, of a handsome gold watch, after he had told bartenders in Charlie Jones' Rex saloon, Peachtree street, that he was a next-door neighbor of Boyd, and that he would carry him home late Friday night.

The officers say that Weaver does not live anywhere near Boyd, who is an old man, and that Weaver had told the bartenders he was Boyd's neighbor just to get a chance to rob the drunk man.

The police allege that Weaver has confessed to carrying Boyd to Pryor and Houston streets, where the police say, Weaver claims to have purchased from Boyd a watch for 50 cents. Weaver gave the officers a very cheap watch, which he claims to have bought of Boyd.

Weaver is held at police station in default of $500 bond, awaiting trial.

WANT 8-Hour Working Day For All City Employees

The Atlanta Federation of Trades and the Georgia Federation of Labor through its president, L. P. Marquardt, have instituted a movement to obtain an 8-hour working day for municipal employees of Atlanta and for all men employed by contractors and subcontractors doing work for the city.

In inaugurating this action the labor leaders say that in some departments of the city some of the employees work a day of ten hours, some nine hours and others eight hours. Those working in the city hall, they point out, enjoy a day of eight hours by reason of a special ordinance, and they wish to obtain the same regulation for other municipal workmen.

Want Highest Wages.
An attendant result the labor men also wish to gain is that the common laborers, whether working directly for the city or for contractors or subcontractors engaged in public work, shall receive the highest prevailing wage received by laborers working for private enterprises.

In line with this movement Councilman Claude Ashley, Monday afternoon introduced in general council a resolution providing for a charter amendment empowering the city to inaugurate a general 8-hour law for all employees on municipal works. The measure was introduced at the request of the legislative committee of the Federation of Trades. It was referred to the charter revision committee of council and will probably be reported favorably.

Leaders in the event council refuse to take this step, say they will resort to the referendum vote. The tentative measure advocated by the labor leaders of Atlanta and endorsed last week by the Atlanta Federation of Trades, contains the following points:

Ashley's Ordinance.
"An ordinance prescribing that the hours of all work of all city employees shall be limited to 8 hours of each 24 hours, and that no employee shall be permitted to work more than 8 hours in any 24 hours, except in case of emergency, involving life, limb or health of the community, or in the event of such emergency, and during its continuance, the proper department head may suspend said 8-hour provision."

That council shall provide for the proper re-employment of service time of all employees, making such 8-hour provision uniform among all of said city employees.

That no common laborer of said city shall receive less than the highest prevailing wage paid for his particular grade of work. And all skilled mechanics engaged in work for said city shall receive for their said work the highest prevailing wage paid to skilled mechanics for the same character of work.

That no contract for public work for said city shall be entered into by the city which shall require any contractor or subcontractor, shall not be required to work in excess of 8 hours in any 24 hours.

That any contractor given any city work or any subcontractor, who shall violate any of the provisions of this ordinance, shall be liable to said city the penalty of $500 for each and every violation thereof.

All employees of the fire department of said city shall be exempt from the provisions of this ordinance if being recognized that their work is an emergency character as herein stated."

EDGAR ALLAN POE

POE'S genius in its own field is unrivaled and unapproached. He created a school of fiction that has had many imitators, but none that even the most fulsome courtesy can compare with him in depth of feeling, in effective style, and in his weird and mystic trend of thought. His poetry possesses a charm of melody more closely akin to music than verse. His tales of mystery, imagination and humor are

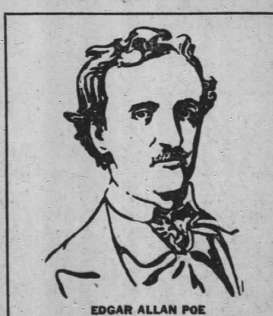

The Greatest Short Stories Ever Written

The universal popularity of his books is not confined to this country. In European countries he is highly esteemed and in France he is read more widely perhaps than any of the leaders of American literature. No collection of books owned by an American is complete without a set of Poe's works.

Poe the Inventor of the Detective Story

Sir A. Conan Doyle, whose Sherlock Holmes stories are known the world over, says: "Poe is the inventor of the detective story and is pre-eminently the master of the short story. The imaginative quality, intellectual skill, keen adaptation of means to end, subtlety of thought, management of dramatic effects, are qualities upon which I delight to dwell, and I would emphasize my own indebtedness to Poe and my appreciation of his great abilities."

EDGAR ALLAN POE

"It would be hard to find a living author who had displayed such varied power. As a critic he has shown an superior ability that we cannot but hope that he will collect his essays of this kind and give them a more durable form. They would be a very valuable contribution to our literature, and would fully justify all we have said in his praise. We could refer to many others of his poems than those we have quoted, to prove that he is the possessor of a pure and original vein. His tales and essays have equally shown him a master in prose. Mr. Poe has that indefinable something which men have agreed to call genius."

Poe is the most remarkable poet the United States has produced.—Alfred Tennyson.
A man richly endowed with genius. His prose is remarkably vigorous, direct and yet affable; and his verse has a particular charm of melody, an atmosphere of true poetry about it which is very winning.—Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

Summer School in Atlanta

Attracting Large Attendance

The officials of Cox College have been kept busy the past week registering students from Atlanta and from all parts of the South in the various departments of the Summer School. The Normal Courses for teachers and the Curry School of Commerce are proving especially popular, while many high school students are registering for work leading to advance credits or the working off of conditions. The Conservatory of Music, which in full operation, is also attracting many students and large numbers are matriculating in the Department of Domestic Science.

All departments of the Summer School are now in full swing. Students who wish to take the various courses must register within the next two weeks. The dormitories are open to summer boarders, as usual, and the Chattanooga features are proving unusually interesting to the citizens of Atlanta and College Park as well as to the students and summer guests.

"The Road Cruiser"

Ready—the 1916 Hudson Yacht-Line Body—Ever-Lustre Finish—$200 Less

This new-type Hudson has won a remarkable following. It has brought to all men new ideals of a class car, changing the entire vogue. It has trebled our output, forced immense factory additions, compelled 31 makers to follow our footsteps. Within 20 months, this lightweight Hudson has been adopted by 15,000 motorists.

Now comes another $200 reduction. Now comes the Yacht-Line Body, with new grace, new luxury, new roominess and comfort. Now comes the fulfillment of your dreams—a finish of lasting lustre. Today this favorite class car starts a brilliant new career.

Remember Its History

Two seasons ago this new-type Hudson came out at $1750. Its announcement startled Motor-dom. Its price was pronounced impossible in a high-grade Six. Its lightness—under 3000 pounds—was scoffed at as incompatible with strength.

But the car was a Hudson, and Hudson standards are high. Howard E. Coffin was its designer, and he stands foremost in his field. He and his whole corps had spent two years in testing and perfecting it. And men were waiting for a class car which would cut down operative cost.

So our first month's output was sold before any one saw the car. When the car appeared men flocked by thousands to it. And for one whole year thereafter Hudson buyers waited weeks for cars.

Then a $200 Reduction

The next season the price—which seemed so impossible—was reduced to $1550, because of multiplied output. Thirty-one improvements were made in the car, including still lighter weight. Another year's work by our engineering corps showed in its refinement.

This model was soon 4000 cars oversold. We shipped 1000 cars by express. It became at once the largest-selling car in the world with a price above $1200.

That changed the whole trend in motor car designing. It became evident to all that the day of overtax was ended. Men would not stand for excess in weight, price, size or operative cost. All cars were built lighter, most prices were reduced. And in 31 factories this new-type Hudson became the pattern car.

Now Comes Graceful Yacht Lines

Now our designers have spent another year on this car. There was no way to improve the chassis. Fifteen thousand cars, covering millions of miles, had failed to develop one fault. Every part and detail had been refined to the limit.

So in this third model they gave their time to the body. They worked out this stately body, with its graceful, sweeping yacht lines.

Every broken line is eliminated. The top-line of the body and the doors is leather-bound.

And they created this luxurious tonneau. The sides are higher than before, the rear seat is much wider, so it doesn't crowd three adults. The car seats seven, with all the room that anybody wants. And the extra tonneau seats disappear when not wanted, doubling the tonneau room.

You have never seen a body so impressive and graceful as this Yacht-Line Hudson body.

Now Comes the Ever-Lustre Finish

And now comes for the first time what you have dreamed of—a lustrous finish which stays new. It is the greatest innovation of the year.

In our new factory addition we have built mammoth ovens, with capacity for hundreds of bodies. Now our body finish is baked on in many separate coats. Each coat of finish is now applied under pressure which fixes it as never before. After each coat the body goes to an oven where it is baked for hours, then rubbed. This is done with every coat—an exclusive Hudson process.

The result is a body that stays new. The finish is smooth and brilliant. It resists sun and rain, washing, rubbing, mud. Experienced motorists who have seen bodies grow old and dull will consider this Ever-Lustre finish the most welcome improvement in years.

"We combine it with enameled leather upholstery—better than has ever appeared in a car at this price. And with deep, hair-filled cushions, which means enduring luxury as well. This year's new body features mean much added cost. But it means a revolution in finish, in comfort and appearance."

Now Comes the $1350 Price

And now comes another big reduction. We have built additions which will double our capacity. We have worked out countless new ideas in efficiency.

We are building here now, under ideal conditions, more high-grade cars than were ever built in one shop. As a result, we are giving you now the greatest value ever known in a class car.

Last year we reduced this car $200. This year we reduce it $200 more. We are selling this model 23% below its startling initial price—$400 below it. Yet a hundred makers, when they saw the car, pronounced our first price impossible.

Why this New-Day Type

This Hudson was the pioneer of an entirely new type of car. The type was conceived four years ago by Howard E. Coffin, our famous chief designer. It took him two years, aided by our whole force, to work out his conception.

The idea was refinement—the elimination of crudity—to result in a light, staunch car. The first step was a new-type motor, small bore, high speed. By reducing piston shocks that made it possible to lighten a hundred engine parts.

The next step was aluminum in place of cast iron. The next was special steels. In the next, a thousand parts were re-designed to combine lightness with strength.

The final result was a 7-passenger Six weighing under 3000 pounds. Old-time Sixes averaged 4500 pounds. That difference—the weight of 11 adults—cut tire and fuel cost in two.

This 1916 model, with this new-style body, is on show here now. Be among the first to see the new lines and new comfort.

The Vogue of Simplicity

Howard E. Coffin saw years ago that the trend was toward simplicity. Now everybody knows it. Excess and waste are unpopular. Good taste now calls for satisfaction without show.

This Hudson has become the class car. Its owners, in large part, are men who have paid two and three times its price. Hudson typifies the ideals of the times. This fact is conspicuous, wherever you look about.

All questions regarding this new-type car have been answered on the road. There are 15,000 Hudsons of this type in use. In two years men have driven them many million miles. And every owner vouches that the car is staunch, enduring, faultless, as well as economical.

Hudson now embodies all that any man can want. It is the fine car of the modern type. Only those men who still take pride in some form of excess will find any car more appealing.

Like No Other Car

Bear in mind that Hudson is like no other car. There are many models of this type, but there are scores of ways—important ways—in which Hudson is unlike them. Let us point them out. This is a Howard E. Coffin creation, a finished product, unique and unapproached.

Dear Sir: Both Mrs. Rich and I have driven your Hudson Little Six for fourteen months. I was so delighted with the car that we are re-ordering the same thing in a 1916 model. This speaks exceptionally well for the car, for I have no mechanical turn of mind and have not raised the hood of my car once during the afore-mentioned period, and have had no chauffeur to look after the engine. In other words, the car has given practically perfect satisfaction. I heartily indorse it.

With kindest regards, I remain very truly yours,

Dear Sir: I have had my Hudson Six-40 fifteen months and have driven it 12,576 miles. I am a hard driver on a car, but the Hudson has stood the test in a manner which makes for my saying it is the greatest light car I ever drove. I have averaged from 13 to 15 miles per gallon of gasoline, and have had practically no mechanical trouble. I consider the Hudson a marvel and am a most enthusiastic booster of it because of the service it has given me.

While racing cars I became closely acquainted with Howard E. Coffin, the designer, and have always felt that his word was the final authority on automobiles. Since I have been driving one of his cars I realize it more than ever.

Very truly yours,

My dear Mr. Goldsmith: The Hudson Little Six which I bought from you a few months ago has proven eminently satisfactory. Having no technical knowledge of automobiles, I was guided in the purchase of this car largely by the experience of other Hudson owners, whose testimony was uniformly favorable.

Dear Sir:

In answer to yours of the 10th instant in which you asked for an expression as to the service I have been getting both from my car and your company, I take pleasure in stating that I have nothing but praise for the Hudson; and the service you have rendered me has been satisfactory in every particular.

I purchased my Hudson-37 in October, 1912, having it delivered to me at the factory in Detroit. I drove it through the country to Atlanta and, although a new car, the performance of it on the road was all that I could expect or ask. You can judge better of how well I am pleased when I state that I expect later to get one of the Hudson-6's when they come out, January first.

Thanking you for the many courtesies that have been extended me and congratulating you on having a car like the Hudson to boost, I remain

Very sincerely yours,

Dear Sir:

I drove one of your 1912 Hudson cars, model 33, for about twelve months. I have had one of your 1913, model 37, for some ten months now, having driven the car about six thousand miles. I have used the car daily, making a great many country trips over some pretty rough roads. I have found it thoroughly satisfactory, and regard it as the best machine of its class on the market.

Dear Sir:

I have been driving one of your "Hudson" cars for about twelve months, and it has given me a great deal of pleasure and satisfaction. It is just the character of car I need for my personal use, and has served its purpose most admirably.

It gives me pleasure to make this statement to you, and especially as I am informed that you have a newer model which is superior to the 1913 which I am using; but I have no need for a large car. On the contrary, it would not serve my purpose. I remain, Third Ward Civic Club.

A grassy knoll in Grant Park was the scene of the June meeting of the Woman's Third Ward Civic club. Much interesting business was transacted; a committee was appointed to co-operate with the committee from the Pioneer Woman's society in the work of a better housing for the old war-organ Texas; and a more accessible approach to Fort Stevens. The ladies discussed Justice, Perkins, Harding and Parks, and Miss Kate Smith, will meet with the Pioneer women and it is hoped this long neglected and much needed work will speedily be accomplished.

Suitable resolutions were passed upon the death of Mrs. Elizabeth McDonald Olickson. The school committee reported enthusiastic work among the children. One school asked for bird-boxes instead of flowers, and their request will be granted next fall. President Florence Traux had asked that each member bring some one with regarding the needs of the war-organ. Many splendid widows were brought forth, but after much serious discussion it was decided that for the summer months the work of improving Grant Park be taken up. The park committee will ask the park department to meet near imperative conditions now extant. A strenuous campaign will be waged

Third Ward women stand ready to help the park commission in every way possible. It was decided to have a get-together meeting on July 2, at 2 o'clock, newspapers p. m., with a picnic supper, the men being invited to come to the supper after the club meeting. Further announcements will be made through the

THREE Most Important Things To TEACH A BABY—

NATURE, MUSIC AND KINDNESS

"He has been and is a great force in the development and natural education of the child and the race. The child recognizes in the dog qualities superior to his own and regards him as a member of a common family. For a playfellow to an only child the dog fills an almost indispensable place, if the child is to repeat the race history, and his absence from a family of children is an irreparable loss."

The favorite pet animals among children, according to an inquiry among 3,000 boys and girls, are the dog, cat, canary, rabbit, horse and pigeon, in the order named. In an inquiry in which the sexes were separated it was found that boys prefer the dog, horse and rabbit, while girls prefer the cat, canary and parrot.

Children's love for flowers and their close sympathy and kinship with them is regarded by those who are concerned in the study of child-training as powerful aids in cultivating the imagination, the moral nature and the sense of beauty of the child. The value of flowers to the child, according to Alice Thayer, who has written extensively on the subject in the Pedagogical Seminary, is based on the "kindness and sympathy which flowers arouse in the child and the predominately good and noble qualities with which they are endowed in terms of fancy."

By Mary Watts.

UMBOLDT said, "Whatever we wish to see introduced into the life of a nation must first be introduced into its schools."

The modern child training expert begins even earlier to inculcate the lessons which he wishes to enter most deeply into the consciousness of the coming generation. He begins with the child in arms and says, "Whatever we wish to see introduced into the life of a nation must first be introduced into the nursery."

With this idea in mind the very earliest playthings of children are now regarded as of foremost importance in child training, and those who wish to see the coming generation more humane and more keenly alive to the true beauty and joy of life than are the people of to-day begin while the babies are still in their cradles to introduce them to the great world of natural beauty, to the joy of song and art, and to the humanity and consideration for others which may be best developed in the young child through kind relationships with animals.

Many persons who have associated much with young children have noticed that they are always primarily interested to know what animals eat.

Mr. Michael Guyer, writing in the Pedagogical Seminary, points out the fact that this universal curiosity in regard to an animal's food is the natural first step to a broad and enthusiastic knowledge of animals.

"It is true," says Mr. Guyer, "that a crawfish, in terms of structure, is an astacoid macruran decapod, but never mind that. What the child is interested in is what and how it eats."

Mr. Guyer suggests that persons who wish to interest their children in animals should begin by answering their questions as to what the animals eat. The next step is how the animals get their food, how they are equipped for their work, whether they lay up food or eat what they need each day, &c. After the food habits of the animal are known, then the child will be interested in its methods of self-protection, its weapons, which may consist in flight, in armor, in color projection, in methods of signalling to its kind, &c. Next comes the animal's home, and the child wants to know whether it lives alone or in a colony, and if in a colony what part of the work each member of the group performs. The animal's means of protecting itself from bad weather will next interest the children.

After the children have become familiar with all the phases of caring for itself which are to be considered in relation to an animal, they may be still further interested by its manner of caring for its young. From the laying of the bird's egg through all the steps of parental instruction to the development of the creature to the mating stage the child will continue to delight in studying the animal if his questions on the actual life of some animal which may be watched are answered by his parents.

Dr. Hodge in "Nature Study and Life" points out the possibility of developing children's natural interest in plant and animal life into an enthusiasm constituting a "safe philosophy of life." And G. Stanley Hall says that in the love and study of nature are rooted the "great human interests of science, art, religion and human history and society."

As to the value of pet animals in child training, all observant persons, as well as those who have made a scientific study of the subject, are agreed. W. Fowler Bucke, writing in an educational publication, says that a genuine interest in a pet dog develops a humane spirit and creates a safeguard against many criminal offenses.

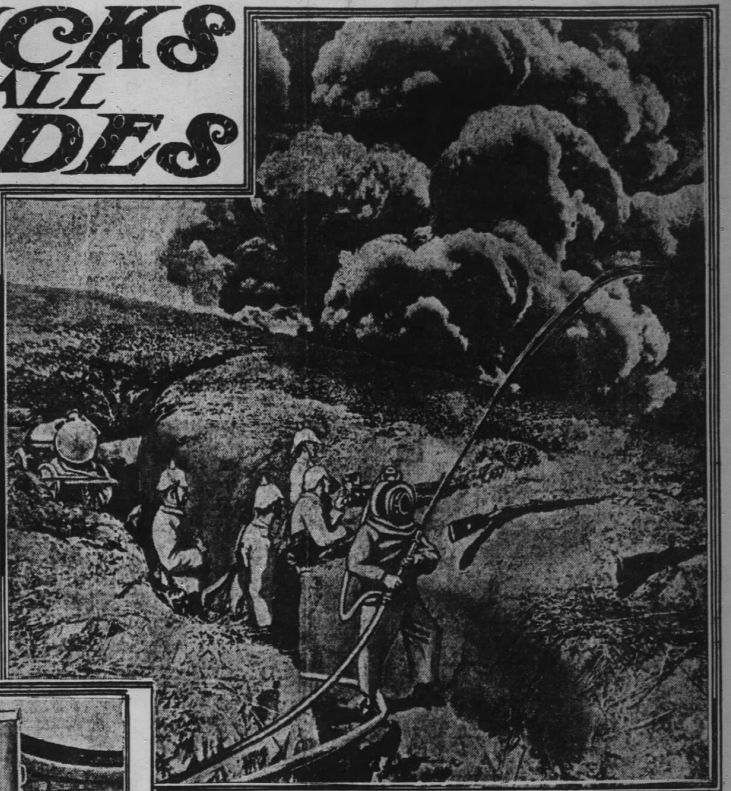

Of the dog as a pet Mr. Bucke says:—

TRICKS IN ALL TRADES

RIVALING the Ancient Greeks and the Legendary Wooden Horse of Troy. The French Red Cross Are Shown Removing the Body of a German Sniper Who, Concealed in a Dummy Horse, Picked Off a Number of the Enemy Before Meeting the Same Fate.

The War Game Has Its Share of Them, as the Pictures on This Page Bear Witness—The Germans Have Been the More Adept at Their Use, Even to a Replica of the Trojan Horse.

ABOUT the opening of the eighteenth century, when the practice of warfare had settled down into an established routine, the word "strategy" in its proper sense was introduced into European military history. It meant, in the words of Moltke, "the practical adaptation of the means placed at a general's disposal to the attainment of the object in view."

In the present maelstrom of strife across the Atlantic anything that serves to bring victory is termed strategy by those employing it, whether it be an ingenious marshaling of troops in a brilliant assault or the resort to a trick that throws the enemy off his guard. The technical meaning of the word has again been discarded.

Aside from tragedies attending the return of the ruse, and the introduction of new devices, they are interesting as examples of human ingenuity. Take, for instance, the trick played recently by the Germans at Settles-sur-Ane—a trick similar to that which gave the crafty Greeks entrance into the City of Troy.

Hoping to reduce the number of French infantrymen that barred their advance, the Germans built a dummy horse and in it concealed a sniper. Armed with a powerful rifle, this son of the fatherland picked off quite a few of the enemy before the latter came to realize that there was something mysterious about the animal. A machine gun was trained on the horse, which, although hit many times, neither moved nor fell.

When no more shots came from the direction of the animal, an investigation was begun. The Frenchmen were not surprised to find it made of wood. The dead body of the German sniper was discovered when a door in the side of the horse was opened by the French Red Cross.

The English employed like tactics in getting their first troops ashore for the land operations against the Dardanelles. On the day preceding the landing the attention of Turkish patrols was called to a big collier drifting in apparent helplessness toward the shoals which lined the shores near the plains of Troy. While they watched the boat struck bottom, and in the gathering twilight the crew was seen to take to their boats and row hastily toward the sea.

Feeling sure that the stranded vessel would be safe for the night, the Turkish patrols made no attempt to board her; but when they approached again in the morning they were met by a sharp fire from 2,500 British troops, strongly entrenched and supported by a battery of field artillery. These troops had landed during the night from the apparent derelict.

However conspicuous the zebras may be at a circus, one can scarcely distinguish it from the tall grasses and trees in its natural habitat.

This has not been lost sight of by military experts. Along the German East African border the ponies of the soldiers have been dyed with permanganate of potash in order to make them less noticeable in the field.

The British surprised the world along this line when it became known recently that they had provided for a boat aero base, and had painted the vessel in such a peculiar manner as to make its outlines invisible to the enemy.

The capture of a German prisoner at Serlingue, after the Teutons had occupied the Champagne district for a number of weeks, revealed the wonderful thoroughness and ingenuity of the kaiser's fighting force. When searched a photograph taken from the prisoner confirmed the statement made by a French official in describing the battle at Malancourt Wood.

The photograph showed a helmeted Prussian, in a uniform made of asbestos, spraying liquid pitch to add fuel to the flames already blazing around an opposing trench.

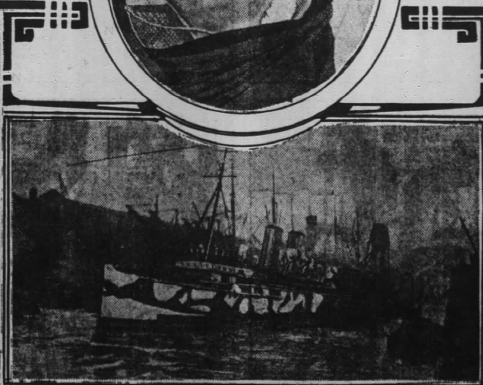

The use of poisonous gases to dislodge a foe is also an innovation of this greatest of all wars.

The gases in question are, of course, peculiarly effective in confined places such as trenches, bombproofs and dugouts. To thwart the Germans British inventive genius has come to the front, helping out to no little extent. As a protection against the gas bombs a special respirator has been adopted. A small valve on top opens as the wearer exhales and shuts automatically as he inhales.

Many other tricks and devices are being used by the contending armies, among them that of placing dummy cannon where they will be seen by the enemy. The object of this is to draw the fire of the enemy so that his exact position may be determined.

REO

ANNOUNCEMENT!

As it seems to be the fashion to make June, or mid-season, announcements, here is Reo's. We will continue to maintain Reo Standards in every regard and in every detail of the product and we will redouble our efforts to make more good Reos in hopes some day to catch up with the demand.

IT WAS THIS POLICY of adhering to the high standards set by Reo in the beginning that placed Reo in the splendid position it occupies today—so that policy will not now, or at any time, be departed from.

REO IS ONE OF THE TWO OR THREE makes of automobiles that enjoy practical immunity from competition—one that can shape its course without regard to anything any other maker may choose, or be forced, to do.

EXPEDIENCY NEVER has been a controlling factor in the Reo policy because the product has always been so good that, never since the first Reo left the factory has it been possible to make enough cars to supply all who wanted Reos.

REO POLICY FROM THE FIRST was based on the one idea of permanent satisfaction to the user. And only by building cars of quality regardless of all other considerations could that Reo objective have been attained.

TODAY, PRICES of many materials that go into motor cars are higher than ever before. Leather, steel and all products into which copper enters are higher than when the present prices of the two Reo Models were established.

LOOK UP THE QUOTATIONS and you will learn that that is so.

NOW IT HAS BEEN OUR PLAN to increase the price of Reo cars whenever we felt that, by so doing we could make them better. Reo preference never was based on price but on the quality of the Reo product.

DISCRIMINATING BUYERS have always been glad to pay Reo prices for Reo standards of excellence and the backing of the Reo guarantee—financially second strongest in the world and in integrity—good intent—second to none.

SO AT THIS JUNCTURE the logical thing to do would be to increase the price of both Reo models to make up for the additional cost of manufacture—for materials average higher and cost of labor—as we make Reo cars—is not less than when the present prices were established.

THAT WOULD BE THE LOGICAL MOVE at this time did we believe that the high prices of good materials would obtain for long. But we don't. We believe it is the result of an extraordinary condition and so is only transitory.

OF COURSE THERE WOULD BE another way; namely, to cut the size of the car—wheel base, width and length and depth of seats—and to skimp the quality in countless ways that it could be skimmed. Ways, too, that the average buyer could not see and would not discover for a few months.

BUT THAT IS UNTHINKABLE—such an expedient never has and never could occur to the men who make Reos—the men who set the Reo standard.

NOR WOULD REO BUYERS—that select clientele that has always shown such a preference for Reo cars—accept such a product at any price.

THEY ARE ACCUSTOMED to wearing real leather shoes—and they will not consent to wearing paper or cloth shoes now just because the price of leather has advanced.

NOR WOULD THESE ACCEPT a car so skimmed in size you could get five full grown adults in only by using a shoe horn! Nor one with a "safety factor" just sufficient to "get by."

THEY HAVE BOUGHT REOS BECAUSE they knew the Reo standard of "50 per cent oversize in all vital parts" could always be depended upon even though the maker had to pay more for steel and other metals.

REO POLICY HAS PAID—it has justified itself in every way that gratifies the hearts of men who like to make honest goods. And it has paid handsomely those who were so wise as to select Reos, for they have found that in all the world there is no other automobile of so low upkeep cost—such wonderful consistency of performance and so few repairs.

TODAY THERE ARE 60,000 Reo the Fiftys in use. Think of that number of delighted owners singing the praises of Reo every day. For you never yet met a Reo owner who wasn't a Reo booster. Never one that wasn't more than satisfied—never one that was quite willing to admit that any other make of car could be as good as his Reo.

OF COURSE IF YOU ACCEPT mere "specifications" as value there are several claimants.

BUT IF YOU MEASURE values as they are and compare every detail of design and of construction—the work, as well as the material: if you appraise experience as an asset and the Reo guarantee a bigger one:

AND IF YOU ADD the good intent that you know goes into Reo cars—then Reo The Fifth has no rival, no competitor—no peer. And today there are few who even try to dispute the ground. That field has, by common consent, been yielded to Reo—and Reo quality was the reason.

AND THE NEW REO SIX, "the Six of Sixty Superiorities" is today the most popular Six in America if demand is any criterion.

SO WE'LL CONTINUE to maintain Reo standards in every detail. We'll continue to make Reos just as big and just as good and at the present prices even though prices of some commodities that are vital to the permanent stability of the car have advanced.

THAT IS OUR "ANNOUNCEMENT" and that is our attitude toward the tens of thousands of friends who have bought Reos on the basis of Reo quality and Reo standards of making cars—and of doing business.

WE HAVE TO APOLOGIZE for only one thing in the Reo policy—our inability to make enough to supply you all. And that is because our policy has been never to run after the fleeting phantom of quantities—never to seek the kind of prestige that mere numbers gives—but to make only as many Reos as we could make and make every Reo good.

FOR WE FEEL that every Reo car carries with it the Reo reputation—and so in each car must be incorporated all there is of Reo engineering skill, Reo experience and Reo integrity.

SO IF YOU ARE LUCKY ENOUGH—which means if you hurry and get your order in at once—to get a Reo this season, you'll get that kind of an automobile and at a price that cannot be equalled for the quality—because there is only one concern that makes cars of Reo quality and at Reo prices.

IMPROVING THE LAWN.

A good many inquiries have come to this office in regard to mowing, fertilizing and generally keeping the lawn and for the benefit of all the readers it has been thought best to give in detail the best method for caring for lawns. We had something to say on the subject of making lawns look good. It will be as appropriate to some people now as it was a week and get good results, but others more so. This will depend on the amount of rainfall. If this is heavy and the grass in a good state of growth, in June and July, twice a week will be better than once, but the variety of the grass again will determine this. It can generally be determined how often to mow. Wait till the sprigs of grass are rising up pretty well over the entire lawn before mowing. Too frequent mowing is likely to injure the lawn quite as much as leaving it mown too long.

Should Clippings Be Removed?
There is some difference of opinion about this. Here is room for a difference of opinion, as many lawns have succeeded both ways. It is thought that their removal is advised as a general thing. Too thick covering may have a tendency to cause a growth of weeds, which produce injury to the turf. If the lawn is new or the grass thin, the clippings should be left. New seedlings should be treated more carefully than well established grass.

How Close to Cut?
This is a matter generally of individual taste, but in reality a subject for consideration where a pretty lawn is desired. New seedlings should never be clipped very close. During the hottest months of July and August the machine should be set high for old and new grass alike. The shade is needed, and the grass needs as much of its vitality left as possible.

Watering the Lawn.
The practice here is fundamentally wrong. Lawns should be watered thoroughly, and not just sprinkled. There is no phase of the care of lawns so important as watering. It is the tendency to cause an abnormal development of surface roots, and to keep the grass from anchoring itself thoroughly in the soil. Sprinkling, a little while is very deceptive. It seems to saturate the soil with water, but in reality only wets the surface. This surface moisture does not anchor itself in the soil below, and becomes much weakened within a short while. If then left without this light sprinkling for several days, it will turn yellow, or wilt and even die, or become very much thinned out.

Except in rare cases the lawn should not be watered often than two or three times a week, but should be watered thoroughly. If this practice be followed, the lawn will begin to take on new life, and will last better and show the grass off to the best advantage.

Bermuda and Orchard Grasses.
The Bermuda grass will need more sunshine than other grasses to make a good growth. It will not do very well in any shade and must therefore grow at all under the shade of trees. Only a few exceptions have been made. The orchard and rye grasses which require the open sunshine. They grow well in the shade of trees, and in the summer, and make a beautiful lawn in the shade of trees.

To Overcome Weeds.
Much discussion is not necessary on the subject of weeds. The remedy is to keep the grass in the best state of health that the weather cannot make any headway. Cut and mow the lawn as often as possible, and establish themselves. Lift the roots of the weeds and pull them out. Use a good top-dressing of fertilizer for the lawn. The weeds will be killed by a light sprinkling of nitrate of soda.

The Housekeeper's Council Table

Conducted by Dorothy Dolan

Variety Required in Daily Menu

By DOROTHY DOLAN.

HERE is no place where a woman shows her common sense or her lack of it so much as in planning the weekly menu. For the sake of argument you can divide housekeepers into two large classes—one comprises those who plan their meals to tickle the appetite, and those who are afraid of indigestion and other ills, so they have a limited variety of food and dishes which they dish up week after week.

Those in the second class, for want of a better name, might be called cranks. In spite of their care they find that they are suffering from nervous indigestion and many other allied ailments.

Go to Market.

This is just the time of the year when every sensible housekeeper will go to the market once a day and as many more times as she can to get acquainted with all kinds of foods and their possibilities.

It is only by handling the large variety of fruits, vegetables and dairy products that you will begin to realize the importance of giving plenty of variety to your cooking and the endless opportunities that are at hand. The women who live in cities and in towns where are daily or triweekly markets naturally learn the joy and privilege of seeing a goodly variety of fresh food.

Nature is doing her part by offering you such an abundance of good things to eat. It is up to your judgment and intelligence to make the right use of this splendid bounty. In selecting these and in planning your menus from day to day and from week to week, remember that only those foods are valuable which do for the body what the body needs to give it health, energy, strength and endurance.

Because of the limited supply of fresh vegetables and fruits you could have during the winter you have probably depended on meats and desserts until you may perhaps neglect the value of fresh vegetables and fruits in making your daily and Sunday menus.

If you are a judicious housekeeper you will have two vegetables on your table each meal, and when you omit meat from a meal you will feel that you can afford three. Now is the time to reduce the amount of meat which you use. It means reducing the expense account, increasing your health and getting a large variety of food.

TALKS WITH THE WOMAN WHO WORKS

THE other day I came upon a winsome young girl, with a pink nose and a perfect bow-shaped mouth, sobbing as though her heart would break. It was with real difficulty that she explained between tears that she was to have her first two weeks' vacation since she had gone to work.

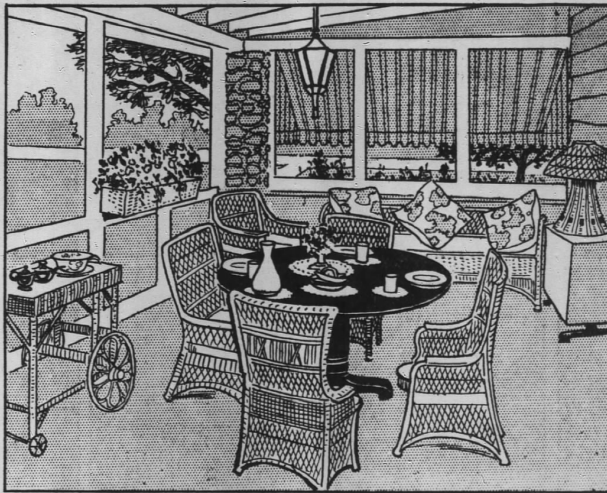

"It would not be so bad," she explained, "if I did not have one of the nicest invitations in the world. You see, they have a beautiful home in the country, with everything to give a girl a good time. This means a large lake in which to swim and to fish and on which to row. There is a golf course and a tennis court, the girls have a small car—in short, everything is ideal but my clothes."

"Poohish child, do not let that stand in your way; it never stands in the way of any well-bred girl or woman. By a little tact and management you can get all the pretty toys you need, and even have more than you have room for," I said.

"I don't see how you can talk that way," the young girl answered, no less disheartened than she was at first. "Though my friends want them, they will expect me to do them justice. If I only had a handsome suit evening dress, a wrap to match, and a large picture hat trimmed with rich plumes or a large hat with a large veil, I might have a chance of holding my own with the other girls."

"Stop right there!" I exclaimed, refusing to let her continue those foolish remarks that she was imbued with—those tyrannical ideas of dress and what good dressing means. "I agree with you, but when she says, 'The dress of dress depends upon line and color. The ethics of dress depends

THE furniture is gray with a flower stencil in yellow, blue and red, and the table will seat eight and is set with gray crash doilies worked in cross-stitch combining red, black, yellow and blue, and the china carries out the same colors in a conventional design.

Home Decoration and Furnishing

By MME. MAISON.

OUTDOOR living is now the accepted thing for both town and country, as all modern apartments have sun parlors and sleeping porches in many instances, and what a splendid innovation it is. By the way, have you noticed the great improvement that has been made of late in the screening for porches and windows?

That of the rustless copper wire is almost invisible, and it wears season after season if given the proper care. And the awnings—how decorative some of them are, when we think of the old blue and white striped ones of our childhood days.

A porch that pleased me immensely had a fireplace on one side, with black and white stripes. The brick was dull red. It took two 9 by 12 floor rugs to cover the floor space, leaving a two-foot border of the dull red tiles picked out with black showing.

The furniture was gray with a flower stencil in yellow, blue and red, and the table would seat eight and was set with gray crash doilies worked in cross-stitch combining red, black, yellow and blue, and the china carried out the same colors in a conventional design.

Decorations for Bedrooms.

I have often read your suggestions on interior decorating with great interest, and now would like to ask your advice on my own account. We intend building out our house this summer in order to have more bedrooms. I have an old black walnut bedroom set with mahogany-topped dresser and washstand which belonged to my grandmother. I wish to use this in a north-west bedroom. What color shall I have the walls tinted, and what window draperies, dresser and washstand covers, and floor coverings, shall I use in order to bring the room into harmony with the old-fashioned furniture? In another bedroom with a western exposure I shall use a brass bed and white enameled dresser. How shall I decorate this room? Thanking you in advance for your advice, I am,

Mrs. S. W. C.

Kidneys and Bacon—Cut the kidneys in halves, lengthwise. Remove all the fat and skin them. Lay them in cold water for half an hour. Take out and dry them. Cut them crosswise in thin slices.

Slice the bacon thin and cut each slice in two pieces. Place a piece of bacon on a skewer, then a piece of kidney, and then alternate them until you have five pieces of kidney of each on a skewer. Dip the pieces of kidney into melted butter before they are put on the skewer.

Place the skewer on a broiler and hold it over a bright fire, turning frequently until all sides are cooked. When the kidneys are broiled place each skewer on a finger of toast and sprinkle lightly with pepper. Put a tiny bit of butter on each piece of kidney and serve immediately.

Baked Peas—Peel and cut the peas in halves and pack as tightly as you can in an earthen jar or casserole. Put in enough sugar to sweeten according to taste. Add half a teaspoonful of water for each pound of peas, a few cloves and two or three bits of lemon rind. Cover the dish carefully and bake in a cool oven for five or six hours. Serve with whipped cream.

Cherry Salad—Wash two cupsful large cherries. Take out the stones and fill the holes with chopped nut meats. Lay the cherries on white lettuce leaves. Put over it a dressing made of cherry juice, a little lemon juice and plenty of sugar.

Chocolate Pudding—Use one-fourth pound of unsweetened chocolate with four cupsful milk. Stir in the yolks of three eggs and also one-half package gelatin. When cool add the whites beaten well and stir through the pudding. Put it in a form. Serve ice cold with a custard sauce flavored with vanilla.

Apple Custard Pie—Make a quart of strained tart apple sauce. Melt and stir in one-half cupful butter, one cupful sugar and cinnamon. Line a deep plate with a good crust and fill it with the mixture. Bake in a moderate oven.

Novelties In Home Entertainment

By DAME CURTSEY.

DO NOT carry silver-tollet articles, but use celluloid, as it is light, and weight is a great factor when packing either in a bag or trunk. There should be a case for soap, tooth brush and nail brush, and, of course, a comb and brush, also clothes brush, button hook and manicure things may be selected all of the same pattern and color. Where two or three are traveling together it is rather better for each one to choose a distinctive color, like pink, blue or yellow. Manicure cases are now so small that all the implements may be found inside the "buffer," the top lifting off, revealing everything tucked like peas in a pod. There are almost numberless articles to be selected in leather, including drinking cup cases, umbrella straps, shawl straps, dress hanger cases containing either two or three forms, cloths of all sizes, medicine cases, needle, thread and thimble cases, and the most stunning work bags, lined with silk.

A folding umbrella is indispensable, and it will fit in even a small suitcase not much larger than a man carries his cigars in, and I suppose a cigar case would not be amiss, for so many are "doing it" now. "Doing what?" I hear the chaperon ask, and I calmly say, "Smoking." After all, it is only a matter of custom and environment, for a lately returned traveler from South America who returned by way of England says he saw more women smoking than not.

An individual "mess" set will not come amiss, containing a folding spoon, knife and fork, and there are some new cases for lavender salts that have a silver top. There are several sizes. Small flasks and leather bottles may be included in the leather gifts, also the cases filled with powder leaves, and in the more expensive articles will be found the modern which add much to both ocean and mountain travel. A pocket flashlight costing only a dollar is not to be despised, for one never can tell when it may be a comfort, and it will be prepared for any emergency.

A recent bride was the recipient of this pretty shower, which was given on the lawn surrounding a beautiful old-fashioned home.

Reply to Bessie.

There is no reason for you to "get mad" as you are not engaged to the young man; it is his place to make the introductions, as the ladies are his guests.

Reply to Betsy.

If your parents do object to your going with your friend I do not see how you can go. I see no harm in occasional parties on Friday or Saturday nights, but I do not see how you can go with your school chum, for there will be plenty of time in the years to come for parties and you will only have these precious school days once.

Reply to Bessie.

VIVIAN'S Heart to Heart Chat

HARDLY a day passes but the pertinent question is pressed home to me by some romantic engaged girl or her no less romantic fiance as to where they shall go on their honeymoon.

There are those who suggest making a trip from coast to coast; others suggest a visit to a number of fashionable hotels, where they will have afternoon teas and plenty of fashionable dressing by day and a ball every night at one or the other of the hotels.

One young and enthusiastic young woman goes so far as to suggest that her two weeks' holiday be spent in an aeroplane.

If young people consider excitement and adventure a part of their natural and normal life, let them have it, but do it at some time other than their honeymoon.

This is to be pardoned of the young girl who has spent her young womanhood in the country and has been longing to see some of the city's pleasures and gaiety. But there is little novelty in this experience for two young people who have been enjoying this excitement for the last six months or more.

For such as these there are a number of pleasant ways of passing a simple and romantic honeymoon. The most satisfactory of these is to spend a fortnight or more out in the country. Here you may have your choice between living in a private home or camping out.

If you are fond of many home comforts, the home will appeal to you the more. Still, it is possible to enjoy a honeymoon in a camp or in a tent. By this means you will start learning what co-operative housekeeping may mean in a simple way. It will be a pleasure instead of a task for your husband to help you build the fire, to prepare the meals and to contribute his share to the dish washing and tidying the place.

You will have all the time to enjoy the charms and the quiet of your surroundings without suffering any intrusion from strangers or friends. Your days can be crowded with simple pleasures, such as rowing and canoeing on the lake, with a daily plunge into the lake or the stream. All nature will rejoice in your love and contentment, even to the birds and to the flowers. They will teach you secrets of joy and love you have never known as you saunter through the woods or as you play with the flowers in the meadow.

A WORRIED ONE.

I think you are right in the feeling that you do not want to give up your young man for monetary considerations. It is not quite fair for your mother to take that point of view. She wanted a home and family and she should want the same for you. I am sure by exercising care and economy they can manage until your brothers earn more. Besides, if the young man is fond of you he will do what is right by your family. I love for you, if nothing else will prompt him to do this.

On Tuesday George Kleine presents a rollicking comedy, "Who's Who in Society," featuring Della Connor. On Thursday and Friday Valli Valli, the exquisite star, will be seen in "The High Road." On Saturday, Courtney Foote, supported by Thomas Jefferson and Gladys Brockwell, will be presenting a Mutual Master Picture, "Up From the Depths."

Stars and Scenes of Big Film Plays Which Will Be Shown At Leading "Movie" Houses of Atlanta During This Week

2. Vivian Martin in "The Whishing Ring," at the Victoria this week.
3. Helene Leslie at the Alpha Tuesday in "From the Shadows." 4. Scene from "The Arab," presenting Edgar Selwyn at the Grand Monday.

ANSWERS TO MOVIE FANS

Business Man: Florence LaBadie lives in New Rochelle, N. Y. James Cruze and Marguerite Clark live in the same city. Marguerite Clark is not married. Mackay Arbuckle is. Tell your wife I never saw Warren Kerrigan's teeth, they look to be all right in the pictures and photographs.

F. P.: The Lucky Feature Plays are distributed by the Paramount Pictures Corporation. Matt Moore is with the Universal and Owen Moore is with the Famous Players' company. C. E. Madsen and Mary Fuller are both very popular; can't tell which has the greater number of admirers.

W. Gold: Alice Brady is in the early twenties. James Cruze and Marguerite Clark are usually appearing together. Mr. Cruze is the older. Francis X. Bushman is in the twenties. He says he is younger, but we know married.

M. S. T. R. T.: Do not know of any.

"THE ARAB" MONDAY AT GRAND THEATRE

Edgar Selwyn Stars in Screen Portrayal of Irvin Cobb's Great Story.

"The Arab," a picture which Edgar Selwyn has spent months to produce and in which Irvin Cobb, the famous lecturer, author, humorist takes a role, will share laurels with a return performance of "The Juggernaut" and other big picture offerings at the Grand theater this week. Cobb's performance of "The Juggernaut" was an American tour de force. Irvin Cobb was induced at an immense salary to portray the character of an American tourist in "The Arab." Many Atlanta people who have never seen the humorist will avail themselves of the opportunity to witness him at work in the film.

"PURSUIT OF PLEASURE" MARGUERITE CLARK AT THE MONTGOMERY

IN "WHO PAYS?" SERIES

Second Drama in Pathe Series Shown Wednesday at the Montgomery and Alpha.

Booked for Monday and Tuesday in Two of Her Greatest Successes.

The theme being the story of a woman who ignored her birthright—how she repented—and of how it was she was damned by contributory circumstances in the form of a clergyman, a disilluminated husband and an age.

It is a coincidence that the "Wildflower" and "The Crucible," the vehicles in which Miss Clark made her initial and her second appearance on the screen, should be chosen as the feature for Monday and Tuesday at this theater. In the delightful story of sweet innocence and youth, Marguerite Clark, as little Roberta, is a most captivating creature.

The audience that smiled with this captivating star in the happy role of "The Crucible," will sigh and sympathize with her in the most exciting role of "The Pursuit of Pleasure," at its termination will marvel at the wide dramatic range and versatile powers of our prominent star.

The "Slender Must Pay" is the true-sounding title of Joseph DeGrasse's production, in which the lovely Ida May Park especially to meet the needs of those who have committed the crime of love. It will arouse considerable interest in two reels, with Edna Mason, Arthur Shonts and William Clifford playing the leading roles.

"The Pursuit of Pleasure"

Next Wednesday

At the Montgomery or Alpha Theaters

The theme of this particular offering is the story of a woman who ignored her birthright, the privilege of bearing children; of how she repented, and of how it was too late. Ramified by contributory circumstances in the form of a clergyman of the hell-fire and brimstone variety, a disillusioned husband, and an age of civilization that isn't.

"The Heart of Maryland."

If you think that the feeling betwixt the Yankee and the old-time younger generation, go attend a performance of "The Heart of Maryland"

some afternoon when school has let out. No Johnny Reb, or group of them, even dressed up as such, but a leather-junged school boy when the gray sons of the "lost cause" clamor over a set of bars and a lot with shot and bayonet the blue clad host from up yonder.

There is enough melodrama in "The Heart of Maryland" to disturb Lincoln

J. Carter in his grave—if he had not yet won the battle of Gettysburg. The use of the word "lost cause" is a plentiful much for an artist

of this to be taken as an indication of 16, or thereabouts—even in picture.

There is one beauty about pictures:

the audience is spared from having to listen to the speech of actor-folk of prolonged years who undertake youthful—and even juvenile—characters.

Whether or not "The Heart of Maryland" made a hit when it was shown at the Hippodrome in New York, it earned many tribute-paying nickels

in Atlanta, where it stirred up no end of applause and vocal outbursts.

It is to be taken as an indication of a success in Atlanta, where it was shown at the Strand.

ALAMO NO. 2. Fox Film Managers Called to Chicago To Discuss Plans

Monday, the Alamo No. 2 will present Myrtle Tannehill Monday in Splendid Feature.

Monday, the Alamo No. 2 will present Myrtle Tannehill, the international star, in the three-act feature production "When the Mind Sleeps." Other interesting releases will be a splendid five-reel Mutual Masterpiece, "On the Night Stage," for Wednesday, starring the well-known favorite William K. Hart.

Tuesday, Anita Stewart and Earle Williams will continue to delight audiences in the fifth episode of "The Goddess."

Thursday, "His Father's Rifle," a sensational wild animal picture, will be shown and "Love, Ice and Snow" will be the cooling vehicle for Friday.

Among the Broadway successes in which Miss Tannehill starred were "A Pair of Sixes," "Longshore," "Snobs," Hudson theater, and "Broadway Jones" at the Cohan theater.

In this Alamo Broadway favorite offering, "When the Mind Sleeps," a peculiar kind of scientific horror is depicted. The story concerns the half-witted young woman, who is left as a ward of a kindly-minded clubman.

The girl escapes from her evil surroundings and wanders about the world and comes to the sanitarium of a doctor, who has found that using a drug, he can stimulate clouded wits to clear.

This photo-play brings to the moving picture world an entirely new theme, handled in a very capable manner by Miss Tannehill and her splendid supporting cast.

Marie Cahill, who is starring in "Judy Force" for the Universal program, is wildly enthusiastic about her new work. This is her first film appearance, and she is as happy as a little girl with her first doll.

Lawrence Marston, her director, has had some elaborate stage settings built for this play, one of which is a theater set, which, according to Bert A. Lee, manager of the Copesteville studio, is the best ever seen.

THREE WORLD FEATURES SHOWING AT VICTORIA

Barbara Tennant, in "Marked Woman," Portrays Role of Russian Nihilist.

Three famed World Film releases will be shown at the Victoria this week. With a program of such attractiveness, it is difficult to select the best feature. Vivian Martin, one of the most fascinating ingenues of the stage, will be featured Friday in Owen Davis' play, "The Wishing Ring." This photo-drama is one of the three plays that Owen Davis has written of which the World Film corporation has secured the moving picture rights—the other two being "Lola," in which Clara Kimball Young is starring, and "A Marked Woman," in which Barbara Tennant plays the title role.

Evening will be seen Wednesday in the title role of the play, "Mother," by Jules Ebert Goodman. Miss Dunn portrays the same role in the film version as she did on the regular stage. The picture has been praised highly by experts as one of the finest feature plays in which a star has been seen. Miss Dunn's delineation of the wonderful character will never be forgotten by those who once come under its spell of utter naturalness and fine simplicity.

The other Owen Davis play, "The Marked Woman," will be the attraction Monday, with beautiful Barbara Tennant in the role of a young Russian nihilist, Olga Petroff.

The story opens with the peaceful little home of Olga in Riga, Russia. As a girl she is driven into nihilism by the brutality of the Cossacks towards her sister and she leaves Russia on a mission to China, with the object of denouncing the Russian autocrat in that country. Olga is forced to save the life of her lover, a young American lieutenant, whom she met on her journey from Russia to China. Olga is apparently reconciled to her fate. Four years pass and the Russian revolution breaks out. The European legations are besieged by the Chinese insurgents and Olga is called upon to lead the attack on Prince China's palace. The prince and his child are accidentally killed and the lovers meet again.

Unusual Record as Student Made by This Georgia Boy

Graduating last Tuesday with first honor in a class of ninety from the Johns Hopkins Medical school, Baltimore, Thomas M. Rivers, of Jonesboro, Ga., a son of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Rivers, and a nephew of E. Rivers, of Atlanta, made the phenomenal record of taking three first honors in the three institutions of higher education which he has attended.

Mr. Rivers, as he becomes following the recent receipt of his Johns Hopkins degree, stood at the head of a class of ninety students, every one of whom went there from class A colleges and universities in all parts of the United States.

To Pursue Studies.
This record gives him his choice of all appointments offered by the institution to its graduates. He has elected to pursue higher medical studies at Johns Hopkins for a period of two years. The first year will be devoted to higher medicine and the second year specializing in diseases and complaints of children, which he proposes to make his life work.

Not only did Mr. Rivers take a high stand in his class, but he is personally popular with his fellow students and associates, as is indicated by his recent election as president of the graduating class, a distinguished honor coming from the Johns Hopkins academy he stood at the head of his class. From there he went to Emory college, Oxford, and graduated with first honor in 1909. In the fall of 1909 he went to Johns Hopkins university with a determination to continue his class-leading record. After remaining there for two years he served for a like period as assistant pathologist in the St. Thomas hospital at Panama City, Panama. Returning to Johns Hopkins in 1913, he has just completed his four-year period.

Offered Positions.
When the class standing was posted for the first time, Christmas, 1914, for the four-year period, he stood at the top of his class, and has remained there. He has been offered most attractive positions in leading Baltimore hospitals, but declined them in order to finish his medical education along the lines upon which he has determined.

Friends and relatives are exceedingly proud of the splendid record this young Georgian has made. His first honor at Johns Hopkins has resulted in his election to membership in the Phi Kappa Beta, a national honor society composed of honor graduates of higher institutions, and also in the Alpha Omega Alpha society, which is the national medical honor society, and is regarded as the highest honors which can be paid a graduate.

Smith-Lever Funds Needed For College of Agriculture

Legislature Should Take Prompt Action in Matter, Says President Soule.

In his report to the board of trustees of the State College of Agriculture and Forestry, Dr. Andrew Soule, president of the institution, stresses the necessity of impressing on the legislature the need for prompt action to secure the Smith-Lever bill appropriations for research work in Georgia to reach thousands more of the farmers of the state who are now begging for the advantages the state college offers.

Attendance a Record.
Dr. Soule reports 712 students enrolled during the past year, 171 in the college of engineering and science and 541 in the college of agriculture. There are 22 more men than last year and 22 graduated this year, five times as many as in 1909. The higher standard of entrance requirements has not diminished the registration.

The broadening scope of extension work under the Smith-Lever plan will give places to many graduates who are always in demand. Seventeen graduates of the college are now county agents for the government. In the forestry service several have taken government work, and there is demand for more men trained for the service.

It is planned to arrange a course looking to a degree in veterinary surgery, and also a degree in agriculture, in addition to the degrees now conferred.

Just 169 boys and 70 girls have taken the short courses at the college, scholarships given as prizes by the bankers' association, the railroads and others. It is cited that the corn clubs of the state, existing ten thousand boys last year, have been largely instrumental in increasing the corn yield per acre in the state from ten bushels to eighteen bushels—twenty million bushels annually. There are in the corn, canning, and pig clubs in 142 of the 148 counties of the state, 18,080 boys and girls enrolled. Demonstrations have been held in 174 counties with 117 men and women employed in the work. There have been 1,212 special meetings held over the state during the year, and 124,359 people have been reached in this extension work traveled 25,558 miles last year.

Appreciating the work of the college, the state farmers, educators and chambers of commerce are maintaining the agents. Another item indicating the enormous work of the college is the fact that 2,522,000 pages of printed matter were sent out to parties asking various bulletins and special expert articles.

Track-Sum Co-Operating.
The college is co-operating with the federal department in many counties of the state in soil surveys of counties. In plant industry, field work in dairy, pig and poultry club work, hog cholera control, co-operative work with the state agricultural department, also being prosecuted along several lines and the chambers of commerce of Atlanta, Macon and Columbus.

This extension work will be added to for the first year of the Smith-Lever system, if the legislature makes that fund from the federal government available in Georgia, by the sum of $150,000.

The receipts from the college farm for the year were $10,172.69, a slight decrease from the year before. The receipts from the dairy were $500 more than last year—$5,450. The profit on the farm was $2,467, and from the dairy $1,254.

The property owned by the college by inventory is reported at $42,823. Full reports are made on the college farm, live stock, the poultry plant, the greenhouses, the campus, department activities, the departments of astronomy, animal husbandry, forestry, horticulture, agricultural chemistry, veterinary science, farm mechanics, poultry husbandry, extension and demonstration work, the executive office and student activities.

Attention is called to several pressing needs of the college: More class

WARE OIL WELL SUNK TO DEPTH OF 1,212 FEET

Waycross, Ga., June 12.—(Special.)—Boring at the well that is being sunk in the south of Waycross in search of oil will be well under way again next week, after a brief delay caused

The Japanese Red Cross has nearly 2,000,000 members and an endowment of $15,000,000. It is a marvel of efficiency.

NAVY HAS NO LURE FOR ATLANTA YOUTHS

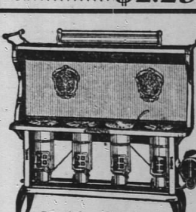

Although the local office of the navy recruiting service has been in position to take recruits for the United States naval reserve since April 1, there have been no enlistments to date, despite several applications.

An enlistment in the naval reserve is for four years, and at the end of that time if a member of the reserve desires to re-enlist he must have spent two months time aboard the United States ship of war in one of those years.

ATLANTA LAW SCHOOL GRADUATES BIG CLASS

Diplomas to 31 Men, Certificates to Two Women, One of Whom Led in Scholarship.

Judge Nash R. Broyles, of the court of appeals, will deliver the graduating address to the senior class of the Atlanta law school Monday night, when thirty-one young men will receive diplomas from that institution.

Two young women who have completed the course will have seats on the stage at the commencement ceremonies in addition to the thirty-one graduates, but will receive certificates only. They are Miss Agnes Louise Klein, of Atlanta, and Mrs. Beatrice Castleton, of New York. The faculty of the Atlanta law school decline to accept women students in the school except on condition that they should not receive diplomas from the school, as such diplomas under the Georgia law admit a graduate to the practice of law and because the Georgia law forbids women to practice in this state.

On the commencement program, in addition to Judge Broyles' address, will be addressed by Hewitt W. Chambers and Walter LeCraw, winners of the two prize contests in oratory. Robert M. Arnold, who was elected by the faculty, will deliver the valedictory address. A prize consisting of a set of law books, given for the highest scholarship in the class during the year, has been awarded to Mrs. Castleton.

Following is the program for the graduating exercises Monday night at the Atlanta theater:

Music: The Empire State—address by Hewitt W. Chambers, winner of prize debate.

Music: Maintaining the Law—address by J. Walter LeCraw, winner of oratory prize.

Music: Valedictory address, by Robert M. Arnold.

Music: Address to graduating class, by Justice Nash R. Broyles, of the court of appeals.

Music: Delivery of prizes and degrees, by Hamilton Douglas, dean.

Benediction, Rev. P. T. Durham, D. D.

The trial of George Carum on a charge of murder, which began last Thursday in the criminal division, Fulton county superior court, will terminate with the arguments of counsel for the state and the defense before Judge Ben Hill Monday morning.

Assistant Solicitor Stevens is scheduled to make the final argument for the state in the prosecution. The defense is represented by J. M. Moore, Moore & Branch, and John A. AUTO MOBILE TAX LAW IS DEFENDED BY GRICE

Attorney General Fights Injunction Sought by Motorists of Savannah.

Savannah, Ga., June 12.—(Special.)—The validity of the state automobile tax was defended by Warren Grice, attorney general of the state, today when the petition for injunction of automobile owners and motorists to prevent the enforcement of the registration and license law was argued for a hearing before Judge Charlton in the superior court.

Mr. Grice defended the law with numerous decisions and authorities touching on certain points. He claimed, first, that the injunction proceeding is not the proper remedy in a criminal case. Second, that the law is not unconstitutional. He attacked the law on the grounds that it is a police power to regulate autos and motorcycles on highways; that the legislature should be petitioned for a reduction of the fee before the courts are appealed to, and that the claim cannot be made that the revenue which will be derived from the fee will be more than the expenses because the expenses cannot be foreseen.

Each of these points was elaborated upon. With reference to the claim that the body of the act covers matters not referred to in the caption, he said the act received the careful attention of the governor. It was referred to Thomas S. Felder, who passed upon it, and who has written instructions as to its constitutionality. The courts cannot state that the law is unconstitutional relative to whether the fee is too high, but they can state that the law is unconstitutional relative to whether the fee is too high. The courts cannot state that the law is unconstitutional relative to whether the fee is too high.
